WHY Unify?

In the name of God,
the most gracious, the most merciful.

All praise is due to God,
the lord of the worlds.

The most gracious, the most merciful.

Master of the day of judgement.

You alone we worship and you alone we ask for help.

Guide us to the straight path.

The path of those whom you have blessed, not of those who have earned your anger, nor of those who have gone astray.

- The Noble Quran (Recitation)

Table of Contents Page 3

Preface Page 5

Introduction Page 8

Ch 1. WHY Relativity? 13
Ch 2. WHY Dopamine? 16
Ch 3. WHY Yoga? 19
Ch 4. WHY Pray? 22
Ch 5. WHY Police? 26
Ch 6. WHY Masks? 28
Ch 7. WHY God? 31
Ch 8. WHY Brightness? 36
Ch 9. WHY Recycle? 41
Ch 10. WHY Halal? 43
Ch 11. WHY BPM? 45
Ch 12. WHY Alcohol? 47
Ch 13. WHY Marriage? 50
Ch 14. WHY Interest? 65
Ch 15. WHY Capitalism? 76
Ch 16. WHY Guns? 87
Ch 17. WHY Fluoride? 99
Ch 18. WHY Read? 109

Where does ego lie? Logic vs Emotion

If emotion is tied to love, then that would mean that logic would be tied to ego. However, this only applies to the love that we think is 'love at first sight'. The opponent of 'love at first sight' is choosing who to give your love to. If we are told that the most rational decisions are made by logic and not emotion, then it is absolutely impossible that love is strictly tied to emotion. In fact, rational love could be completely logical, while the ego can take over our emotional side.

Is it logic or emotion that tells us to treat others how we were treated versus how we want to be, which was 'the golden rule' growing up? If you rid yourself of ego and step on the side of love, you get stepped on by people, but not by destiny, nature and karma. The law of reciprocity keeps you humble knowing a greater than average award is awaiting if you went through a greater than average hardship. So what would happen if we chose ego, rid ourselves of love and choose personal gain versus the gain of others? Wouldn't nature, destiny, and karma eventually reciprocate?

The answer to that question is considered your 'test' in holy scripture. If we continue to treat each other like this, we run the Earth that gave us life to the ground. No pun intended. However, if we follow the golden rule and treat others how we want to be treated, reciprocally we all eventually benefit. Our entire species would live prosporously instead of committing suicide, in the shorter than long term.

PREFACE

This book, just like any of my interactions with any human being, is intended to change your life. For the better, of course. Within the age of information, it seems like some people are dumber than ever. Not fact checking book smart dumb, but common sense street smart dumb. Just a century ago, humanity was on a hunt for information, seeking to learn, discover, and grow. Today, as unlimited information is at our fingertips, our habits have become the complete opposite. We are lazier, more impatient, and not even focused on the reality we are living in.

Relative with the increase of information available to us now versus a hundred years ago, our passion for learning not only has not grown parallel to it, but surely even took a decline. What I am saying is that we do not care about learning or discovering anymore. One of the key components to the growth of our own human race has diminished. Why? What has changed over the past hundred years, particularly the last twenty?

I remember when I came to the United States at six years old, the only information available outside of school was at a library or on a tv screen, only one per household. Life was free of many distractions from succeeding in school, career, this life and the next; until hormones started kicking in, if you know what I mean. Hint, what I mean is women. Unfortunately, this is a distraction for all men, and to keep those men from being able to focus to achieve superior things, sexualization of females has skyrocketed in the last century. Why? There isn't enough room at the top of the pyramid for too many superior people. At least in a capitalist world there isn't, where success is valued higher through individual innovation than collective prosperity.

On the opposite end of the sex spectrum, women aim most of their focus nowadays to look good for society, the same society that has made them insecure through this sexualization. Simply put, women don't need make up to be beautiful. Well, some do; the ones who eat nothing but fast food, rarely exercise, and spend more time on Instagram than in books, so they make themselves ugly. I don't believe anybody who chooses good lifestyle habits becomes an ugly person. However, businesses intend to make you think otherwise through their marketing tactics, like selling you alcohol and cigarettes.

While in my senior year of college at Texas A&M, I was in a business management class where I learned these profiting tactics. My mind was then sent into an investigation of the world. I have always observed more than I interacted, some would call it people watching. After all, isn't the loudest man in the room the least intelligent? Observing is important because it is simply a synonym for learning. I just wish I would have spent more time observing my teachers in grade school than challenging their authority and keeping my attention deficit satisfied by roaming the halls and playing basketball in the gym during class.

One of the most important success quotes I have ever heard that has driven my habits in life is,

"Great minds discuss ideas. Average minds discuss events. Small minds discuss people." - First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt.

Being surrounded by the future of the world, a.k.a today's students, so consistently for the past few years, I noticed that their main focus is people. People on Facebook, Tik Tok, Youtube, Snapchat, etc. Life has become a whirlpool of unproductivity for the young generation. Let's take you for example. Chances are, you use some medium of social media. Below, illustrated is the profit chain that enslaves us all.

YOU. Social media. People. Social media. Mainstream media and celebrities. CEO's, or lobbyists of things we actually need, excluding media. Then lobbyist investors who exploit interest, and finally the governments.

At the end of the day, the investors invest in what the market wants, and the market is run by YOU. We, the people, are the ones in control, we just need to unify.

INTRODUCTION

In this knowledge bank, I am going to share with you how and why humans have been exposed to way more information than we can handle in the past few decades, what it has done to our thought patterns and lifestyle habits, and why we feel the urge to intake more and more information. Remember, a human's biggest disease is insatisfaction. With so much information, not ever getting to it all fuels this disease. This will all be told from a logical perspective, from somebody who taught logic in his high school math classes before Coronavirus corrupted educational systems. I am not a doctor, I am not a 'certified' psychologist (but have read dozens of books about how the human mind works), however I am a teacher that wants his career back without having to worry about being cancelled speaking up against the oppression of my students. I seek to help you understand my perspective through your own logic, something God gave us all, but has been rotted by people not using it. The good thing about logic is that it can only be silenced, but not manipulated as our emotions have become. We can prosper as a human race with the understanding in this book, and always asking ourselves one simple question. Why?

When you do a search on google of "How many thoughts does the average human have per day", this answer is revealed - "Experts estimate that the mind thinks between 60,000 to 80,000 thoughts a day. That's an average of 2,500 to 3,300 thoughts per hour. That's incredible. Other experts estimate a smaller number, of 50,000 thoughts per day, which means about 2,100 thoughts per hour." What could be the difference between the two sets of experts for one to have about 150 percent more calculated? The higher calculated numbers could be coming from more of an ADHD group of test subjects, would you agree? There is no question a human that has a harder time focusing on the outside world has so much more happening inside of their mind.

As humans in the year 2020, we have a whole universe at our fingertips. We can connect, play, research, create, watch, record, and much more without moving any muscle other than our eyes and thumbs. Not more than about fifteen years ago, we had to go to gatherings to connect, which required us to get nicely dressed, tie our shoes, transport ourselves from one location to another, while moving at the same relative speed with the world as nature intended.

To play, we would interact, sweat, even pick up on how to be a human being based on the successes and mistakes we would see in the people we were playing with. To research, we would get to a library, walk through the aisles looking for a book that could answer our questions. To create, we would choose from so many forms of art to build something so beautiful we would put on display in our homes or offices to have something physical represent what goes on in our busy minds.

Most of what is created by us now disappears in ten seconds, not only from the cloud but from our own memory because there are another million things in line to take that spot in our memory banks. What I noticed most in my students' habits is that all the watching and recording runs their lives. It ruins their ability to be human- to want to explore, create, innovate, communicate, debate, and appreciate. Worst of all, the screen causes them to forget being thankful to their creator. That's why I would start every class by having the students share things they were thankful for, something I hope all teachers will implement in the future, if they still exist.

With online schooling, one teacher can teach millions of kids. That would be so much money saved from teacher and administration salaries, and so much opportunity for deregulated propaganda and advertisements. Education has turned into a business, and remember a business's main goal is to maximize profit. The term religion is defined as something that is the main, repetitive focus for a human. Something that used to be the single word closest to God has now become watching and recording.

Some would say the screens are another universe, a man made one. Mark Zuckerberg literally recently announced the unrolling of his own virtual universe called the Metaverse. This universe of possibility can as well be a universe of distraction. Growing up, as most of us do, I had parents that were focused on making a living, keeping me alive and well taken care of. If the world threw something their way and it made me happy, they didn't think to question it because they weren't in that age of humanity. Again, most of our parents make the same good intentioned mistake, it's not their fault for trusting the system.

As a 28 year old millennial barely entering into the life of a fully formed adult brain, I feel how difficult it is for me to stay focused on one task without having thoughts of other topics swirl through my brain. Even as I write this I start thinking of women, my job, and the most common outside thoughts of the future and the past. These things only prolong the tasks that I need to get done.

If my mind was trained to stay present, and move naturally parallel to the outside world, I would be on chapter three by now; but a forming young mind subject to such rapid virtual movement can only get so far in free thinking, because the muscle of focus just wasn't formed strong enough. If we need focus to learn and to produce, don't we need focus within the transition between the two: to think straight?

Thinking straight can be very different than thinking itself, many would call this logic. My own peers also grew up with distractions such as video games, television, texting and the first wave of social media. What I have noticed in the past five years in which they also transitioned into adulthood, is that they have a hard time being present and very easily fall into addiction. Alcohol, gambling, porn, and vaping make up most of these addictions. Most of the time, life doesn't give us what we want with the swipe of a finger. If humans get used to such instant gratification, then they want to numb the first pain they feel, double the first check they recieve, please themselves to the first though of arousal, and sell their health in exchange for the first chance to be 'cool'.

Television can be a huge distraction from success, with commercials training us to escape from what we're already focusing on then to escape again from the brief focus from each of the five that they play every round. To the more detailed perspective, every time a scene switches to a different setting, even a different angle, the virtual reality moves at a faster pace than physical reality. In this physical reality, it would take more time to walk over to a different part of the room to switch angles, or into another room to change settings. If virtual reality is moving at a faster pace than physical reality, then that physical reality becomes uninteresting. Imagine, we are losing interest in the very world that gives us life.

If a 200 pound adult was on one side of a seesaw, a 50 pound kid on the other, wouldn't there be an imbalance? What would be the point of the kid even being on it if he is completely overpowered? Like the seesaw, what would be the point of having a free thinking mind if there isn't the right balance for that mind to enjoy itself?

The peers that I brought up, like dogs that are trained to wait by their bowl with their drooling tongues, are conditioned to escape from the physical world every couple of minutes. They either run to their primitive desires of attention with social media, or just simply run off to another theme in their own head. Remember, this is not a choice. If it were I'm sure we would all choose to have one hundred percent focus one hundred percent of the time. The choice comes in when deciding how to spend your time. You can either strengthen your focus muscle or weaken it. We were all kids once that wanted our parents' attention. I would imagine that we all want to have kids one day. Don't we want to fulfill that attention they need, that attention we needed once? These are 18 ways we can strengthen our focus. These are the 18 reasons why we should unify.

Chapter 1: WHY Relativity?

Fact check: According to Merriam Webster's dictionary, the definition of imperialism is the advocacy of extending the power and dominion of a nation, especially by direct territorial acquisitions or by gaining indirect control over the political or economic life of other areas.

Welcome to the twenty first century, a blobs world. It is like they watched the show “My 600 Pound Life” on TLC and said let's make everyone like them. Don't be so sensitive, and don't be so naive either. We've all gotten more prime packages to show up at our door than friends since the plandemic started. A lot have bought more intoxicants. Small businesses are out of the competition, and so many are eager to throw money away to get injected with something, like they all became the people on the “Cops” episodes all of a sudden. As if they haven't already paid for masks and tests, I mean we have a new industry here.

Economy is not doing good? That's not what Bezos’, Musk’s, Gates’, Suckerberg’s, arms dealers’ and politicians' accountants are saying; but relatively to what a person knows, they may say something like "The economy is doing so bad." But wouldn't they want you to have something to point a finger at instead of peeking through the curtain a little bit and discovering what's going on behind it?

Albert Einstein once discovered the theory of relativity, a greater invention than the iPhone, but few people even know about it. Why? Because unlike the iphone that's leading the world to feel so unsatisfied, relativity is the exact opposite. His theory was based on astronomy and where something physical lied on an infinite plane, such as Earth in our universe.

Relativity can also be looked at metaphorically. Simply put, relativity is how light or dark grey is compared to black or white, respectively. An example would be a person seeing a flying object and calling it an airplane, but he can only name it relative to what he knows about flying objects.

Public service announcement for all women out there continuously brainwashed with Maybelline commercials. No Maybelline, she was born with it. As a man I will tell you, the man that you need to put a mask on for waits for Halloween only once a year. It is just another invented industry; but for our kids, it is another way to disguise their personality into something material to push more money into the economy, that's supposedly failing. Yeah, failing its people.

As the generation that's been tossed out into the world already, we know what the world has done to our human interaction with the competitive advertisements. It is our responsibility to help our youth not get brainwashed. Banks even offer quick attainment with credit, hence exponential inequality growth.

Relative to where the world was a decade ago, our relations with one another have went to sht. Let's be real, we all spend more time with a screen than another human being. Isn't that ironic? But if we watch that screen, smart people make smart advertisements to make you think that your baseline to compare your own life to is one of the highest profit margins for those companies.

Have you ever thought about how repetitive commercials are? It is called subconscious branding in the marketing industry. Like when you wake up with songs stuck in your head. Your thoughts become a product of advertisements. And because of the exponential inequality growth, eventually those ad spots get taken by the richest brand, not the one that's maybe the healthiest for you.

What if we focused on how we lived relative to one another out in the physical world instead of the virtual one we've all become so consumed in? Not everyone's standards would be the beverly hills lifestyle. A lifestyle resulting in you spending more on something material that gets worn out just like you and I do before we pass. Remember the ego that's never satisfied? These marketing geniuses know about it too, and how to use manipulation tactics like Maybelleine to make women so insecure about themselves they keep going back to the shelves.

If we all knew there could never be a most famous, most beautiful, most fit, strongest, richest person out there, would we still be so focused on fitting into this perfect image we base our relativity on? Or would we take what destiny gives us and be thankful for it to use it in a positive way for humanity, that way we have something to show for at the end of our lives. If we're all trying to fit in so bad, what's gonna be the point of having our own life flash before our eyes versus someone else's?

So the concept of relativity is the opponent of the ego too. Now you'll always know that better or worse always will exist relative to what you know and see, so there won't be such an urge to be on top when there is no top. Speaking of the ego, I recently came up with a theory that the ego that religion calls satan gets more powerful the fewer dopamine a human being's brain has.

Chapter 2: WHY Dopamine?

Dopamine is the good feeling chemical your brain sends to your gut when it feels interested. Get your brain tired with all the fake attention notifications then advertise to it? Seems like it worked very well. I mean we even branded God into a cross. Did we forget to measure the number of deaths this year relative to last? There wouldn't be such a panic or politically motivated mandates if we did. Politically motivated to keep you glaring back into the screen that's going to take your dopamine away, make life depressing and sell to your ego the idea that the advertised life is better than yours; but it is not.

If God created black & white and man & woman, then God gives all of us equal wealth and hardships, so that we may appreciate the good times when they come. Therefore, we all live somewhere within the grey area. Will we ever be able to appreciate though, when relative to the physical world the virtual one will forever confuse our dopamine releases responsible for our accomplishment and our happiness?

If dopamine were on one side of a seesaw and the ego was on the other, five minutes in the ego is going to be like an elephant and the dopamine like a fly. Remember the ego is always unsatisfied, so what will it do when the seesaw can't function anymore? Go onto any seesaw it can find, as close as possible, to get its fix. What's the closest thing possible to all of us? The screens feeding our dopamine with breaking news coverage of our world, hooking us on the seesaw. Now our perspective of life becomes branded relative to what that news is. Don't news stations want higher ratings? Haven't you seen the movie “Anchorman”?

Since you become the person relative to your goals and your surroundings, like they say you are who you hang out with, are we becoming less as humans at the expense of their ratings? Among other things like big pharmaceutical profits, a corporate tech monopoly, and a shift into a virtual world including a social ranking currency system to keep information censored and people in check. This seesaw is telling us to wear a mask and rid ourselves of oxygen and to stay socially distant. And chances are that comes with distance from the sun our bodies need as well.

Something's not right here. These news outlets have black people so fixated on something that happened hundreds of years ago. Relatively, that's a lot of whining. Even the Jews aren't complaining about the holocaust still. They're taking action by inflicting the same harm on another race that had nothing to do with the harm that was inflicted upon them! Then selling a message that God is granting permission to go take innocent people's land, even life if need be so that it would be acceptable when they do it.

Oh wait, they've been doing it since 1949. Using the name of God to kick people out of their homes by force in Palestine. If that's not terrorism then the grass ain't green. Imagine how crazy would it be if an entire country believed in this philosophy. Ok, an entire continent... An entire hemisphere? Wow looks like those tvs and news outlets worked.

Maybe the world wasn't so gruesome like the movies and textbooks we read in high school and the video games we continue to play like Fortnite and Call of Duty made it seem. Relative to having them or not, maybe we wouldn't have allowed this to happen. Or if instead of keeping you so dissolved in national conflict, these news outlets would have shown you how the U.S. was outvoted by 95 percent of the countries in the world on making Jerusalem, once the capital of the Palestinian land, belong to Israel back in 2017, leading to more innocent violence. Wouldn't you fight to stay in your home?

Relatively to the rest of the world, it sounds like America voted for evil, and that's why they were outnumbered. Relatively to what I learned in elementary school about the golden rule and what not, I'm wondering why God would go against that golden rule, something an entire hemisphere accepts. I can't imagine the pain these Palestinian people feel, going through what they're going through like being denied access to markets, hospitals, transportation, and then seeing black people wearing masks saying “I can't breathe” complaining about opression.

So as there is talks of going to outer space and to Mars, I think relative to how we screwed up this world, we should worry about fixing it first before we venture out. Do you leave your stove lit when you leave the house? We often forget relatively to all the other planets in our distance, ours is home to millions of varieties of species of life. 8 million. Maybe that's another sign to stop feeding the unsatisfied ego and be thankful for what we have.

But if we were thankful, there would be no new generation of products to sell, and no dopamine seesaws needing to be used because one would work just fine. Then these seesaws wouldn't make billions on vaccines. Remember, their true profit is two chess moves away. Didn’t Bill Gates step down as C.E.O. of Microsoft a few months before Coronavirus happened to avoid people connecting the dots? Have we been subconciously branded to believe that God planned a mass genocide by the same people that don't even allow God into our schools?

Fact check: Nations can get imperialized, but the human mind cannot as long as it is aware and educated.

Chapter 3: WHY Yoga?

Namaste. Peace. We could all use some right now. Along with some more stimulus money eh? But while the government is stimulating our bank accounts, it is doing the complete opposite to the children's minds. Inside the classroom where we spent half of our day growing up, for those of us who could sit still to stay in it the whole time, the children are being thrown into the virtual world. A virtual world that keeps their eyes between four corners and not in the limitless world God gave them. These four corners hold no responsibility over a human like God's world does, so why would we make this virtual world so normal for our future? For example, these four corners don't require the kids to be physically healthy, because ultimately they profit from their unhealthiness. These four corners don't require the kids to be intelligent, because cheating can be done way easier now with even more obstacles for proctoring. Would amazon profit if someone was smart enough to innovate a competitor for it? These four corners don't require teamwork. As animals group together, we do too as humans. So why would we take that out of the training program? Profit. Advertisements. Propaganda. While group projects teach the concept of teamwork, sports do too, in a much more critical way. Sadly, now they preach social distancing in school, cutting out the option for many sports, and not to mention the complete lack of opportunity for the kids doing virtual from home. Don't you see where this is heading? Save expenses from teacher & admin salaries, hire one teacher to teach millions, opening so many doors for government propaganda with virtually no check and balance system. It's not like the parents question what's being taught anyway. They are distracted by the device too. Either from home or at school, technology will end up being our children's teacher, it pretty much already is. The kids are in the classroom watching their teacher who is in front of them on a screen.

Yin and Yang. A parable of reciprocation. Every action has a reaction. Life's symmetrical balance. As sports are a good way of increasing coordination, yoga is a good way of increasing symmetrical balance. Not only that, but it also increases lung capacity, metabolism, awareness, and strength. Aren't these the things we want to increase in our children to expect a healthy humanity in the future? In this privately distanced world we live in now, yoga may be the most efficient form of exercise that exists. The only equipment needed is a mat thick enough to cushion those bony areas in our body, or even a clean carpet. It is an opportunity to pause, reflect, focus, and stretch. Stretching is something so forgotten but it is so essential in the proper functioning of the human body. And with the lack of oxygen we're getting nowadays, stretching would help free up some static in those airways. God created humans symmetrically, with our spine at the core of everything. With all of the weird ways we're contorting our bodies while staring at these screens, the stretching yoga provides can go a really long way. The beauty about yoga is that it is an emerging 'sport', so schools will soon need to adopt yoga into their lesson plans. And as there exists soccer and basketball academies, many souls could find peace through cost effective yoga schools. Now imagine this, students ('socially distanced' to follow guidelines) spread out within the gymnasium, or even better outside on the grass, all in a state of peace, getting away from any momental stress they may have to remember their presence, goals, and even sweating in certain sessions. We forget that sweat brings us the greatest peace, because our bodies get rid of certain toxins through sweat. With girls stationed behind boys, because unfortunately their minds are corrupted at such young ages now. With yoga in school, even the kids virtually learning at home can have some proper physical movement. With such healthy habits being built in early institutions, our youth could grow up to be very intelligent adults. Then as adults, plenty of hot yoga businesses exist, ones that need to offer a free first class if they know what's good for business. So when those kids become adults, they will be responsible enough to love their family, and not feed the unsatisfied lazy ego that the virtual world of education seeks to do.

Chapter 4: WHY Pray?

The second force of God is nature. Nature is what gives us life. The animals, the fish, the trees, the clouds. It is made to sustain our existence. We wouldn't get a chance if it wasn't for this force. Yet we put gas emissions into the air, dump plastic into our oceans, and make species go extinct. The four elements, the branches of nature are earth, wind, fire, and water. It is all connected, because we live on a round globe with a core. Just like your heart sends blood to all areas of your body, just as the four forces of God are connected.

Nature includes the big bang theory; but remember everything in life has reciprocity. Which means everything has a source and receiver. The tv has a satellite. A female has a male. Remember where the child really starts out. The positive side of a battery has a negative side to fall into. Light has electricity. Sound has ears. Good has bad because good would be average if we didn't experience the bad. Therefore, the creation of the big bang had to have a creator. That's why Noah had to take pairs of animals on the arc in order for them to reproduce and sustain their species' existence and ultimately ours.

This is why people who believe in God so much but don't put in effort don't succeed and people who put in effort but don't believe in God don't succeed. Because life requires the pair. Prayer originally comes from nature itself. There's a famous concept that has changed every life it is introduced to and that is the law of attraction. The logical concept of setting goals to get everything you want in life. Setting goals plus faith equals the law of attraction.

If your mind can imagine something to be possible then you really have enough time to achieve it. About 30 thousand days. Speaking of 30 thousand, there is people in the world living off of a dollar a day, you can watch it in the “Dollar a Day” documentary. That means they live their entire life off of the average American yearly household income. Perspective.

Just as nature is truly abundant in resources to help us survive, it wants us to enjoy its benefits. Water is infinite. Haven’t you heard of the water cycle? Rain falls then evaporates. Fruits grow from the ground. Animals reproduce. While the prices most of us pay for these resources are just a made up number, remember reciprocity. Resources need consumers.

So since God wants us to prosper and grow, we are given an imagination, the third eye as some cultures call it. These same cultures brand symbols on their forehead skin on top of where their third eye would lay. What science tells us lies there is the pineal gland, responsible for viewing the world in an outside the box way. It’s basically where our creativity lies. The mind itself requires creativity to realize a creator). If you close your eyelids but try to focus your eyes on that point and imagine your goals you can create goosebumps in your body, and feel your energy completely changing.

Goosebumps are our body’s way of telling us our heart and mind are in sync. Faith plus knowledge to see the vision through; but they can never be in sync if you carry intentions to make yourself superior to or harm other living beings, because they were created by the same creator that created you. This energy is sent out into the universe just as tv and cell phone signals are. You've heard of electrons right? So if everything under God is connected and everything under nature is too, wouldn't the most efficient form of prayer be making a physical connection with nature?

When you connect the third eye to one of nature’s elements, you become a part of the connection to God, like touching a tree branch and being connected to the roots. So which element would we connect to?

Not air because it is physically impossible, not fire because..well.. It could be water, but it’s not our primary habitat, making the most efficient choice earth.

I'm not saying to connect the third eye to the dirt, but to a clean ground. Is this why the prophets, including Jesus prayed the same way? Revelation 7:11, Genesis 17:3, Isaiah 49:23. Falling on their faces and prostrating to connect to God? According to the books, they did. Other than those books, there are cultures that meditate to pray.

The two are really more the same than they are different. Meditation is the pause that is much needed in all of our lives, a pause to reflect, to be thankful, and focus on goals. Thankfulness is the ultimate key to positive thinking and peace of mind, which all of us want don't we? It can be done any time at any place. It’s not as efficient as prayer because of the physical connection, but meditation compliments prayer perfectly.

When you put prayer and meditation together, the enlightenment eventually comes. The more often you put the two together, the faster it will come, just like a basketball player practicing shot form. Therefore to start out the day, we have a chance to meditate on what we are thankful for and pray for our goals. The same opportunity is there at the end of the day; but to keep it original every time around we can be thankful for long term things and pray for the day's goals in the morning, then at night be thankful for the day’s things and pray for long term goals.

And it would also be logical to at least pause for a moment before every meal and be thankful for it, for the health of you being able to consume that food, and for the roof under which you eat it. Instead of seeking dopamine rushes from social media while millions are dying for just a bite. Goals are also a good topic to talk about with the family at every meal. Remember, nature's biggest gift to us past our infinite resources is our imagination.

Writing has been our number one tool to advance our imaginations for ages. It is the most primal way to take our thoughts out of our mind and into the physical world. Although speaking is efficient in the same sense, writing is a bit more efficient because it is permanent. Thankfully, nowadays we have whiteboards. There's no waste of paper when our goals that we write change as life moves on. Visualization. That whiteboard is just a seed that will grow into a giant tree of success that takes up physical space, God willing.

As long as the fundamental belief in our creator God exists in our mind, simply the action of prayer is enough to praise that existence. To prosper ultimately as a human race, our focus should be directed through our third eye.

Chapter 5: WHY Police?

“The cops outside. Lock up the house.” Once said Travis Scott, the most popular face of hip hop, which is the most popular genre in the United World of America. I've been listening to hip hop and rap a lot but the chances of these lyrics coming a couple of months before George Floyd should be causing hysteria.

But instead , emotional pain.
Confusion, and anger filling up a lot of our brains.

They say time heals but it has been 30 years. Rodney King gets beaten by police. Nationwide coverage of the riots in L.A’s streets.

Yet time brought more uncontrollable cops and more innocent murder.
More racism and more... opportunity for blacks to advance further?

My high school principal is black. My ex president is black. Some of the highest paid people in our country are black, like Lebron James and Tiger Woods.
There's even a channel, Black Entertainment Television, the music on there used to be so good.

Something I grew up with, where I learned what it meant for a girl to shake her laffy taffy. In the battle of racially labeled channels, blacks lead by one. Imagine if there was a channel called White Entertainment Television.
CNN might even create it to follow their instigating mission.

But we can't forget about the innocent people being shot, and my man George Floyd. Rest in peace.

I mean at least he's in a place where there exists peace.

Because I don't see it in this world, especially not in the middle east.

People being displaced from their homes, innocent mothers and children murdered by the millions?
Citizens not permitted at local grocery stores and hospitals while the other side makes billions.

Did someone say the word oppression?
It's time to teach a lesson.
Don't call me a racist, J Cole sent the same message.

Last time I checked, every black person shared the same rights, even equal employment. You sign when you apply, come on you know this ; but we can't forget about the innocent people being shot. And my man George Floyd. Rest in peace.

What about the peace in these streets? We have all gone to chipotle a couple of times and had a girl give us less meat than expected. I hate it when they put the beans then the rice, amateurs. Then the bowl gets all soggy. The point is that there's people that suck at their jobs. The person at the grocery store might misguide you, the mechanic might mess up your alignment, and your english teacher might teach you how to improperly use you're & your or to, too & two or they're & their. Your boss might sit in their office and drink instead of going out and mentoring his employees. Your president might be lying straight into your eyes that he pretends to look at in his speeches but really is reading script. And yes, the police might kill you; but chances are, your chipotle server will mess up a hell of a lot more.

Chapter 6: WHY Masks?

2007. The first iPhone comes out and everybody goes bananas. Then the second, third, fourth, fifth.. thirtheenth! Bananas. Everyone is upgrading, every damn year. For camera quality, a bigger screen, an even bigger screen, even better camera quality. The point is they got you. Yes you. Chances are you got to this on an iPhone, one that has the biggest screen and best camera you could afford because that's what everyone else was doing. Upgrading. And as the phones upgraded, so did the signal. Have you ever seen a signal before? Neither have I; but I know it is something with an electromagnetic frequency. Just like humans are. You have heard of electrons right?

Here is a quick refresher. Radiation is the emission of energy through electromagnetic waves. And radioactive waves are a type of electromagnetic wave, a more dangerous one. Some of these frequencies are above our natural capacity. Just like it would be harmful for us to constantly be exposed to the sun's electromagnetic waves, 5G is not so far away from the sun's strength and danger.

The sun emits an output of about 300 thousand gigahertz, while the previous 2, 3 and 4G top out at 5ghz. In between comes 5G at an average of 50ghz, ten times as strong as the previous signals. So If you were exposed to the sun constantly outside of sleeping, you would experience 75 times more strength than 5G radiation. Remember, it has already increased 10 times. So just as this coronavirus grows exponentially, 5G only needs one more exponent to surpass the strength of being in the sun constantly for 16 hours a day. Bananas.

You know what else is bananas? Even if it did and the system was meant to cause cancer. What? Why would they want to kill us? No, they don't want to kill you. They want to make you sick enough to justify giving them so much insurance money every month. Why are liquor stores considered essential businesses? Not because they provide us with our 12 essential vitamins that's for sure. Why do most popular fast food places in California have signs on their windows saying their food causes cancer, as stated in Proposition 65? Who would profit off of it? Doctors, pharmaceuticals that pay them like a referral program pyramid scheme, and the government that employs them, who run all of the information and food we intake.

It gets even juicier. Scientists are coming out saying 5G will have tremendous health concerns, mainly weakening the body's immune system. Does it sound like a coincidence that coronavirus hit at the same time at the beginning of 2020 as satellites from companies such as Space X who utilize 5G were set in place? In the exact same places on Earth! Didn't a lot of us get sicker than ever before even before the U.S. had its first confirmed case?

Test 5G, see it is harming humanity, but choose to continue and distract people with a made up virus? Man, some people had rough childhoods. Imagine, when you look up into the sky from now on you will see stationary lights, but won't know if that is a star or a satellite; one of twelve thousand going up in the next few years. Elon Musk's reason for it is so undeveloped countries like ones in Africa can have access to the internet and all of us can have faster speeds, as if they're not already faster than life itself. And who will profit off of their access? The Doctors telling you coronavirus is real.

These aren't the doctors at your local ER's. These are the federal surgeon generals, the same ones that put the message on cigarette boxes saying it'll kill you, but still sell it to you anyway. Remember who's at the top of the profit chain? We all look down at our phone so much we forget to look up to see what's going on behind the screen. When you look it up, you might get articles saying scientists confirm 5G not a threat, or a screen saying the information is not factual and blocking it, which is what Facebook and Youtube have been doing since the Earn It Act was passed at the beginning of April 2020. What are the chances these things occur at the same point in time in history?

What are the chances Robert Kennedy's kids come up dead just a couple of days after he sued the FCC for not regulating 5G? Members of congress said they didn't even run tests on 5G. Of course they did, you have to test everything; but the results of those tests are not good for their business. Why do we sit by as our world is being connected by virtual things while we cannot even connect with our own families at home?

While it feeds corporate business at the expense of our elder's lives while America and Apple battle their number one competitor, Huawei, the Chinese Apple; but apparently they agreed on a deal early in the year. Maybe to divide and conquer? While we are pointing fingers at who is responsible for the virus, 5G is progressing. 5G that is funded by Bill Gates, who also funded Pirbright, the research company that patented coronavirus back in 2018. A vaccine for it was patented in November 2019, right when 5G was launched. What are the chances that a year later, a Chinese guy eats a bat and gets this fancy, some might say booshie version of it, "Covid 19"?

Well, what are the chances that this information is just exposed out there from a google domain? They are officials, not amateurs. A kid sees the boogie man in a movie and hides under the sheets because they believe it is a real thing. Remember I said 5G operates at an average of 50ghz? It tops out at 70. It is known to the science world that at 60ghz, the radiation absorbs into oxygen and manipulates the flow of it. People are dropping dead out of nowhere, but coronavirus is just the distraction in the chess game of politics. The cause is 5G.

Chapter 7: WHY God?

If we all see the same thing and feel the same thing, shouldn't we believe the same thing if it is based on what we all see and feel? When I talk about God, I am solely speaking of the fact that we were created, therefore there exists a creator a.k.a God. We are all equal on God's scale, so the person that grows up like Tarzan in a jungle should have the same opportunity to reach this enlightenment as someone born into the name Muhammad or Jesus, peace be upon them. If you were given a fresh start in life and dropped in a jungle like Jumanji with no prior influence of a Quran, Bible or Torah, you would only know for certain that you were created, not by what. God wouldn't create this jungle person with a completely different understanding for life than the followers of the books. That's not equality.

Neither is the idea that he created your people to face a test caused by other people, nonbelievers. Because that would entail that some humans were given different natural statuses in the purpose of life, hence more inequality. It is like a teacher assigning online homework to the poor kid without a computer, or going to a pizza restaurant and only being able to eat if you can read the menu in Italian. It just doesn't sound right, and it would lead to such a paranoid life.

So the person would ask, "created by what?" But the only logical evidence you have is something unimaginable, just that it is your creator. Not a cow, because a cow belongs to nature, the second force of God. Not a former human being, because if a human being can be God then we weren't all created equal, and the ego's battery is charged with inferiority. If your ego is high, it makes it easier for businesses to sell you something through the marketing tactic of competition. You will fall for it in order to feed that inferior ego, causing greed, corruption, and deceit. These can get very dangerous when the egos belong to world and business leaders following this ideology, because they ultimately see themselves as another status of a human being than the people.

Even worse, the human as a God belief makes the mind more susceptible to being obedient to other human beings, because ultimately it is an image of inequality. Just look at where we are at now. People are wearing masks in the car by themselves. How can a normal person compete with humans with God like abilities? That puts a cap on our potential. This also makes us easier to control and profit from.

Celebrities are viewed as superhumans, I mean look at how many of us cried for Kobe, as if he was a prophet that brought us great knowledge to prosper as humans, but all he really did was keep us entertained. Isn't their entertainment the ultimate selling point? Then there is the justification of that human being's power of sacrifice to send you to heaven no matter what. No matter if you kill, rape, lie, or steal. It'll just be slipped under the rug. God wouldn't give you an excuse to be bad like that.

This way of thinking can only last for so long until it leads to divorce, jail time, hospitalization, impulsive purchases, substance abuse. Simply put, becoming a hamster on a profit wheel that doesn't belong to you, and sweating in regret. Remember the profit chain? Leaders profit off of the businesses and businesses profit off of us.

For example the alcohol industry, something of no benefit to society but so much profit coming in, is even advertised at your local church, through the grape juice samples that represent wine. Wine that causes birth defects, domestic abuse, unplanned pregnancies, childhood trauma... Something good? Silencing your conciense so you can go and have sex with strangers? Forgot about that one. God wouldn't want that for us. God wants us to prosper, it says that in the Bible. Jeremiah 29:11.

How come it doesn't add up? I mean we all thought Bruce Jenner was a man until he became Kaitlyn; but some things are changed for the benefit of business, remember the ego always wants to improve. We used to watch superheroes fight villains on the big screen. Now we watch superheroes fight each other.

Remember the jungle man searching for the understanding of God? If this person is praying to a material symbol their entire life, logically thinking, they are more focused on the material world than the average jungle person. Aren't crosses with and without Jesus on them at the front of most churches? Most people would draw a cross if they were told to draw religion. Even Buddhas are a material representation of an unimaginable God, no matter how cute their smiles can be. No homo. Wouldn't a material person be easier to sell a material item, or even conceptualize a material item such as money to?

Remember as people put their money in one bank, they do the same with their values in life. A person can ultimately either be a good or a bad person, think multiple choice not free response. As a person can either be an optimist or pessimist. This is why faith is so important. Faith in God and faith in prosperity to the finish line and past it, because every runner in a race must either stand on the podium to accept the trophy or sit down. Making God a material figure also gives more power to the thought of a physical devil, but the devil is really the ego that exists inside of us all.

Even assigning slight human characteristics to God matters, such as calling God a father or using the word ‘he’ instead, because if I call my friend ‘he’ and I call God ‘he’, then that makes them equal in that sentence; But how can a human being be equal to what created him? And we won't even shed too much light on the women viewing the use of ‘he’ for God as unequal.

Up to this point, all we know for certain is that we were created by a creator. A species superior in knowledge to any other species on the planet, yet we still act like animals. Our endless curiosity tells us we are here to build and explore, the physical world and the spiritual world of love. It is the only thing that truly connects us in life. Therefore it is the first of the four forces of God- love, nature, karma, and destiny.

Love is the point of life. We die, as any other species does. As trees do, as cells do, even as seasons do. We know our life is chronologically limited, but I have never seen a possible cap on our relationships as human beings. Remember, we cannot measure love but we all feel it. Especially with that one person that we share the bed with, the compliment to our natural mission in life. Therefore at the end of our lives, another thing we know for certain is that our love is the only thing that limitlessly connects us.

The money comes and goes, the sports car gets bought and sold, those test scores become just numbers that didn't really prove what you were truly made of. Because loving someone isn't taught in a classroom, although it should be. The more love we spread, the greater our life impact becomes. This concept also cancels out living life in the past, something that causes stress for so many of us.

If I make an impact on someone today I feel grateful for God putting me in this person's destiny, knowing my destiny put me there for a reason. If a person spends their life spreading hate, their impact will be puny. Might as well be in hell. What's the difference? It is just a waste of a life. Nobody wants to praise the people that hurt them. The people who suppress the ego that tells you to care only for yourself in order to spread love will have their spirit live forever through the lives of other humans, like a pyramid scheme with an investment of caring for others; a meaningful life not created without a reason. Don't we all want to have a purpose?

The purpose of all of our messengers was to get humans to understand God, which would lead to the betterment of single lives and eventually the whole world; but our human egos realized their messages would go against economic profit, because someone who truly loves would share everything by the goodness of their heart, not inflate, tax, and finance. The messages were all the same, but now they differ so much, causing the very opposite of what they were intended to do. To steer us away from feeding our egos a.k.a the real devil. This is why people are becoming atheists. Their minds just cannot logically find an understanding of God.

It is simple, all we can collectively conclude is that we have a creator, one God that is unimaginable to the unconditioned mind. That love is the greatest feeling known to man. That nature gives us life, karma comes around just as a full moon does, and that we are all meant to fulfill a unique destiny. The true spirit of God guides us through these four forces.

There is God, there are people, and there are prophets who were just people of the most superior knowledge in life. We can all have that knowledge if we just value what they valued, God; but who have we been praising this whole time? The Creator or the creation?

Chapter 8: WHY Brightness?

Have you ever had an idea to do something, then unlocked your phone and completely forgot? Why have we become so distracted? Imagine your field of view is a beautiful painting of nature, then in the middle of that painting is a mirror reflecting you. Which one of the two would you focus on?

Have you ever caught yourself staring at that person in the mirror for way too long, or rerecording way too many times to look like your perfect self on your social media? There is this thing called ego, it is the part of your brain that tells you to get revenge to come out on top, to earn more than other family members for the benefit of your image, or to force your kid to succeed in the area you wish you did. Ego. We all have that voice utter in our head sometimes, religion calls it the devil.

Ironically, is our ego to blame for assuming it is some sort of being instead of the power we hold within? When we begin to break from our ego, we begin to feel the infinite majesty of love, God's greatest force. Eve got tricked by the devil with the apple, so have we all been holding the mark of the beast in our palms this entire time?

Competition is the number one fuel for the human ego. Winning is the goal of competition and our ego. While sports are the healthiest, most civilized way to compete, we are now starting to compete with each other in other ways, like social ranking. They used to ask, "what's your credit score?" Now they ask "what's your snap score?" Are you seeing where this is going? If you have not seen “Black Mirror” on Netflix, it is the world we are headed to, and I suggest you preview it. In reality, China is already doing it; controlling their people by virtually socially ranking them lower if they break rules.

It seems logical that people even with an average ego would want to look good for their peers, leading them to follow the rules; but aren't the rules made by the people who profit from us? When you look into a mirror your ego activates because only you are in your field of view, no one else. No one to give your love to so you must give it to yourself, causing you to also give yourself attention, because we give attention to what we love in life.

That attention eventually compounds every time you see yourself. Unfortunately for you, our ego carries our one God given disease, insatisfaction, hence why it's exploited through capitalism. Most times when you look in the mirror or at a selfie you notice a flaw get worse or a new one appear. The ego always wants to be on top, especially of itself, so it will urge you to improve yourself.

If you are thinking about how to improve, your attention is still on yourself. Even if you improve constantly. Remember, the ego is never satisfied. You could look in the mirror with a smile but your attention is still on who? That’s right, you! But how would you know what is going on around you if you are only focused on yourself? Here's a better question. What if there was a mirror every person had on them that would take their attention away from what is going on around them?

Your very own portable mirror is right on the screen, along with media that is meant to take your eyes off of the greedy tactics of the world's leaders. All while addicting you by giving your brain dopamine release, just as cocaine does to a drug addict. Yes, every like, comment, message; every time you hear that "ding" even if you know it is from someone else’s phone, leads to a dopamine rush. The attention makes you feel love.

Through the screen though, attention can come from infinite sources an infinite amount of times. These sources include a wide variety of people and apps, which make it easy for a notification from even the settings app to spark some dopamine. Our brains don't know if it is from a person or an app before we check it. Since our brain mixes the two in purpose when using a phone, we usually become unproductive due to so much social opportunity.

The infinite virtual world of technology can never be as perfect as the infinite world of God, even if we destroy it by feeding the virtual world our attention. So, sounds like a lot of confusion doesn't it? Isn't a confused mind the easiest to control? How are we not gonna be confused with a tv, tablet, laptop, phone, even a watch?

So many devices that do much of the same thing all around us. No matter what angle we turn, what room we're in. Anything to keep some of us occupied. Have you ever noticed how often kids repeat what they see on tv? We are not so different as adults. How many devices does your household have in total?

Hopefully the brightness is lowered all the way for the sake of your eyes a.k.a the windows to your soul. It's not healthy to stare at the sun for even a second, yet we stare at these screens our entire lives. Ironically, we stare so we can know what is going on around us. When that virtual world is controlled by the people who can profit off of you, it can be used for other purposes like influencing you to compete with one another through sexual exploitation, fashion trends, cinematic violence, religious denominations, even physical violence itself in movies and shows. They even figured out how to make it a sport, U.F.C.

It is easier for a human to be influenced when they are under stress. A kid can be told a million times not to go with strangers, but when they get lost they will be in too much of a panic to think and they will probably agree. Especially if a stimulus check, I mean candy is involved. In most cases that candy would be the dopamine that fuels our egos, that sends us back to the screen for more. More of the information we are supposed to trust, but what if that information is meant to be a distraction?

What's a liar going to do to keep their lie a secret? Point fingers in other places. It is a natural phenomenon that humans have to look at the direction the finger is pointing. Try it next time you are walking in public. I sure have been seeing a lot of finger pointing lately. Any smart businessman, however, knows that to ultimately prosper it is more efficient to partner than to compete. So why are we the people being influenced to do otherwise? Imagine if we all were featured on the news while we were down with the flu.

While you were distracted, the Earn It Act was passed, giving media the right to control freedom of speech. Another distraction is the claimed reason for it, child sex trafficking busts. At the same time the top artists in the world like Tyga are not only on Youtube, but being featured on porn sites with young girls dancing naked in the background, transitioning their young audience into the same path. A path that might lead them to a dating app with no real age verification that is advertised on even NBA jerseys. That might lead them to being trafficked. They must be spending their time blocking 5G conspiracy videos on social media for a reason if these videos and apps are still up.

Conspiracy or not, the 5G towers have been placed in our communities while you were quarantined at home. They look like a tower of speakers. Good news is that it isn’t too late. We can educate each other and focus our attention to God's infinite world; before the entire painting becomes a virtual reality, a mirror to our egos.

If social media protected us from coronavirus, would we use that mask instead? Sadly, we already do. Please be aware, our youth is growing up with these devices thinking it is something naturally attached to us like a floating limb, because they are all around us. They are losing interest in physical hobbies, and becoming less interesting to one another.

Chapter 9: WHY Recycle?

If God can bring life after death, light after dark, season after season, even a perfectly flowing food chain, why can't we just protect that food chain instead of destroy it. We ultimately destroy ourselves like that, because that food chain leads to us. Next time you are at a seafood restaurant, imagine, for every pound of crawfish they serve you today, there are a third of a million of their fellow marine mammals dying that same day. So, about 100,000,000 marine mammals die every year because of our inability to clean up after ourselves.

Not only are the fish affected though. Just like these marine species mistake plastic waste for food, birds do too. They try to ingest it and either end up choking on the material or poisoning themselves from the inside if it makes its way in there. This is why tossing your chewed gum just anywhere can also be harmful to living things.

But it is ok right? We do not see the effect it has because most of us have no interaction with marine life. What if I told you companies such as Nestle and Coca Cola send their plastic drinks into developing countries like Mexico, but don't provide them with a proper way to get rid of the plastic once they're empty, causing about 10,000,000 human deaths per year, more than ‘Coronavirus’ does.

You must have walked by your local lake a few times and noticed how much stronger the wind there is. So imagine, that water bottle you drank today and threw away with the rest of the trash gets to its landfill by the coast. Those strong winds blow it onto the shore and a turtle gets its head stuck in it, but hey it isn’t your fault. Seriously.

Homeowners associations, you send us constant threats to mow our lawns. Nobody wants to be the dirtiest lawn on the street, so that problem is taken care of. You keep telling us to keep our cars in the driveway, but some of us have a full driveway and cannot. You charge ridiculous amounts for ridiculous things. Instead of pissing us off just make your money through implementing a recycling program, for those of you who don't of course.

If our city even has a recycling center it's probably too far and causes an inconvenience. So how can we help ourselves in case our H.O.A's don't want to? Minimalism. Don't grab a spoon and a fork with your togo meal if you are eating chicken strips. Refills lead to less plastic pollution. Less plastic pollution leads to less fish deaths. More fish means more protein for those of us who want to go to the gym and make blind people think we are giving birth. More protein means more sustainability for the ones at the top of the food chain. Why? Because that is us, humans.

Chapter 10: WHY Halal?

Albert Einstein determined the entire universe was an energy field with the equation E= m c squared. Energy that lives through living things surrounds us. We all contain it. You, me, our pet dogs and cats, the squirrel that runs by in front of your car, the birds that fly above us, the trees that sway in the wind. Everything is energy other than material things, things created by man. Natural things, God made things are vehicles for energy just like cars are vehicles for our human bodies. They are used and abused and eventually break down and die, just like our bodies do. So why wouldn't we maintain our bodies well to run as long as possible?

A car cannot run most efficiently with poor grade fuel, so why would you feed yourself poor grade energy? See, halal is not so much about mentioning God or not when the meat is cut, even though the sacredness of killing an animal to keep yourself alive is highly overlooked nowadays. Halal is about the energy of the animal's meat.

If an animal such as a cow is electrocuted or shot to death it does not always die an immediate death. The suspense from such events fills the cow with anxious, scared, and confused energy to fill the blood which fills the meat in the cow. Then it is chopped up and put into our hamburgers. We eat this and we feel full, bloated, tired, anxious too.

Then there is halal. The cow is instantly sliced at the jugular nerve with no emotional or spiritual pain; which means solely positive power is consumed, high grade fuel if you want to call it. We feel a complete difference in our mood after consuming halal meat versus meat you buy at places like Chikfila, Whataburger, In n Out, Burger King, even the packaged meat from Walmart. I'm not even going to talk about the injected hormones. Or Proposition 65.

Well...There is a law in California called Proposition 65 literally telling you on a piece of paper on the window of drive throughs that the food you're about to buy is known to cause cancer. If the high grade fuel your car could consume cost the same as the low grade fuel, which one would you feed it?

Chapter 11: WHY BPM?

Do you keep waking up with music stuck in your head? Imagine if that music was something inspirational to get us active or something educational we were going to use in the future. Instead, pointless words slurred along with much bad influence like gang and gun violence; drugs much harder than marihuana, and the degrading of our greatest miracle, birth giving women.

Among the youth today, they write essays with more than half of it including words like 'drip', 'you know', etc, not making any sense in what they are writing. Imagine, a God given talent ruined by the influence of the modern world. Why would they do this? Why would they want to take our voices away? The way these songs waste our processing power as humans is that we hear the same bass beat going over and over and over again. Too much repetition is never good.

The average heart beats 60 to 100 times per minute throughout regular daily activities such as working, driving, eating and watching TV. However, during exercise our heart rate maxes out at 200 beats per minute. The most popular genres, pop and rap are up at about 130 beats per minute. Nearly twice as fast as our resting heart rates, they cause the brain to move faster than the body if our body is at rest. When the body cannot keep up with the brain, it causes anxiety and stress, leading to inability to focus. This is music we hear at malls, on the car radio, soundtracks to our favorite movies, even while having dinner at our favorite restaurants.

So while the body needs to be calm to chew all of the food in the mouth, most of us rush to stuff it all down, causing stomach aches and digestion issues. While our kids need to have the peace of mind to think about what new parts of the world their eyes are seeing on the car ride home, a lot of us play this 130bpm music and take that peace of mind away from them. Why would society feed this music to the future of their own race?

Don't we want our kids becoming the best versions they can be? We do, but the system doesn't. I'm talking about the system of corporate business that has taken over the world. Corporate tech such as Apple. Resources such as Shell. Logistics such as Amazon. And connective such as Facebook.

Think about it from a business perspective. Why would I give a human peace of mind so they can focus on life, their surroundings? To give them a chance to think freely about life's solutions, chase their dreams, and possibly innovate and make my business obsolete one day? I would probably just rather find a way to take that focus away so they cannot think long enough to figure out outlets for their ideas; so they fall into the system that sends them to my desk space to make me money instead of take it from me.

Chapter 12: WHY Alcohol?

Imagine a little girl trapped in the corner of her room. Not by anything physical, but by her emotions, because her family is falling apart and she has no control over it. This is Jada. Jada was born into a family with an alcoholic father. How did her father become an alcoholic? By getting his heart broken by his first love and being told to go out and forget about her at the bar.

Since then, he has never been able to let go of the habit because of social pressure to keep consuming on billboards, commercials and movies. We all get our hearts broken. Her father would often lose himself in this woozy world where his own feelings were numbed, so he would think others are, too. He would scream and hit and break glasses, chairs and hearts. Hearts of the ones he was supposed to love most.

The urge was so strong by the time Jada was growing up that Jada and her mother would be left alone for excuses such as, "It's boys' night". Jada had a test the next morning she needed help studying for and mom could not help because she had to study for her own. The livelihood of the family depended on her now.

All men know boys' night can get very dangerous from a marital perspective, especially if alcohol is in the picture. Jada's father chose to get a little too wild that particular night. Since gambling is often associated with drinking because of the similar dopamine response in the brain, Jada's father ended up losing the money Jada needed for lunch the following morning. To make it back, his friends made a bet with him to go to a strip club. Given the confusion alcohol gives the brain's logical decision making system and the more it increases desire, Jada's father took the bet.

He wakes up the next morning and his wife asks where he was all night. He claims he doesn't even know. Obviously, his wife begins to be suspicious. This causes fights to break out in his presence. They tell Jada to go in her room and do homework, but Jada continues listening just as any curious child would.

Years go by and things do not change as the dependency is only getting stronger. Dad misses, plays, spelling bees, birthdays, all because alcohol has taken over the part of his brain responsible for controlling desire. Jada sees it as a bottle being more important than his own child. Jada becomes a teen and has Netflix like any other teenager and stumbles upon "13 Reasons Why" and gets the idea to start hurting herself for the attention that her father is not giving her. And of course, it did not work because her father had more of his own problems to deal with, like his liver disease caused by the constant alcohol consumption.

Tonight, Jada and her dad get invited to watch the Super Bowl at a friend's house. Her dad is trying to be a better man and quit his old habits. He gets offered a drink, but declines staying strong. However, those Heineken and Corona commercials playing every five minutes eventually get to him. Now, there isn't a sober person at this watch party to make a logical decision when the game finishes and it is time to go. Jada urges her dad not to drive, but when is a kid's input ever valued nowadays?

The most immediate way alcohol affects your brain function is by impairing motor ability. This is why it feels like everything is spinning and it is impossible to walk in a straight line. So what happens when Jada's dad gets behind the wheel of something so fast and powerful? You can guess what happens next.

The worst part is, Jada did not deserve any of it. And her mother did not deserve to lose her daughter. Let's make sure all the Jadas out there live to make something out of their lives, and all the Jada's dads' get help. Why? Because we are all one race- humanity. If one of our brothers and sisters are suffering then we do too.

Chapter 13: WHY Marriage?

Once you set a goal, karma begins to work to bring out the demons you have built in your past, physical and mental; the two work interproductively. They are supposed to be obstacles to getting to the goal you have set. In the "Black Mirror" episode, it depicts love as that karma goal setting concept, as if you fall for somebody then all the obstacles that get in your way are things life throws at you to see how much you really care about this person.

But what if you go into love with this kind of ideology? If you and the other person are no good for each other, then life will eventually bring you apart with situations such as fights, cheating, lies, etc. It wouldn't be right to think these situations were just tests to see how strong your bond is. That is a destiny for disaster.

When we have these kinds of things happen to us in relationships, then we feel like the loser. Nobody wants to be the loser, in anything. Then we fight to fix things, so we can rebound and get our momentum a.k.a mojo back; but things get worse and we lose full grip, because it is love, something we have no control over. Or so we think.

Life brings us these obstacles to see what we are made of. God created life and God knows what we are made of because God created us as well. It is for us to discover what we are made of and to be reminded of what we deserve. Don't we all want to deserve true love? I think it is the number one thing we all strive for in this life, to feel that one special connection. Or have we been fooled to think that it is?

True love is a mystery between love at first sight and love at first choice. People choose their spouses either based on lust or care. Arousal falls under lust; things nor the body aren't everlasting. Bob will be walking down the street and see Sally, who looks like the girls did in his swimsuit calendar he had up on his wall in his teens. As she is wearing something almost even as revealing, Bob wouldn't be able to take his eyes off of her. Well, Sally would also look like the girls Bob spends a couple of nights a week having orgasms to on the internet. Remember, the internet contains 70 percent porn, and social media isn't too far off.

It is what he spends most of his consistent time on, like a basketball player's eyes recognizing anything in the color scheme of a basketball at higher rates than the average person. Chances are, Bob would walk by because porn teaches his brain that the encounter with her would lead to some taboo fantasy. Even the most basic of it shows another person with somebody else, that is if group play isn't what Bob's watching. However, if Bob eats a lot of pork, because pigs enjoy watching their mate with another pig and to be watched during intercourse, he has a higher chance of being into that kind of stuff. I mean, they do say you are what you eat. It wasn't just a dirty joke after all.

Do cheap cars require 93 premium gas? You are what you consume. Reciprocity. God created us to procreate by needing only one mate, a male and female. God didn't create us to live the taboo fantasy, so why attract that into our lives by spending so much time consuming it?

Now imagine Bob walks by Mildred. Mildred is very conservatively dressed, has a teacher's badge hanging from her belt, a shirt that says "Have Faith". She waves at the children that walk by as she is feeding her dog treats and shows it much love then picks its poop up after. On top of that, is walking out of the Food Bank's volunteer entrance.

As Mildred turns toward him, he notices her butt is not as big as the ones in the music videos, and her lips and boobs are not as perky as the girls on reality shows. Bob doesn't know how to distinguish the difference between real or fake anymore, it is 2021 after all. Bob walks by this one too, not because his social interaction is messed up since life doesn't work like the porn movies. The girls that spread their legs that easily in real life are the ones you get std's from.

Bob walked by Mildred because he didn't even care for any of the details that showed him who Mildred was. His brain has become wired to see the boobs, butt, and lips. Who do you think would have been a better wife to Bob and mother to his children? Now, if Bob was a muslim, he would know that Mildred would closer fit that description solely by how she chooses to represent herself with the clothing. If Bob walks by Sally and cannot take his eyes off of her, then other men probably do the same.

So if Bob marries Sally, he is going to have to deal with seeing all the men on the street drooling over her, making his drool feel less special to her and her body feel less special to him. It would probably turn him on though, if he ate a lot of pepperoni pizza. That is why Bob would know to pick Mildred. Mildren doesn't choose to get her attention from the drooling perverts, but from the things she puts her love into like her students, her dog, and her homeless people. So Bob knows that his drool would be the most special drool to Mildred. Don't we all want to feel special?

I guess these muslims were on to something with the pork and covering thing. Maybe all of mankind could be living peacefully while overthrowing these corrupt leaders if they weren't all drooling over plastic, and not even recycling it. By the way this is the reasoning behind the hijab. Just as Bob looks at the curves on a woman because they are something to grab onto, her hair plays a vital role in his sexual arousal. Chances are, at some point during sex, dominance will need to be established, other than when the sperm that starts out inside the man ends up inside the woman. Isn't the person who starts a race first the dominant one, as opposed to who starts second?

Reciprocity. Dominance requires submissiveness. There is no more harmless, yet sensual act of dominance than winding a fist around a woman's hair and pulling it. Unfortunately, Bob won't ever have a chance to be dominant to neither Sally nor Mildred. Bob won't ever choose a girl like Mildred to care for because he has been taught by the world through media to chase lust and always got his heart broken by it, by women like Sally.

Remember, Sally didn't have anything to love other than the attention she received. So the more she received, the more fulfilled she felt. Bob's attention would never be enough, it was obvious from the first time he saw her. Sadly, heartbroken people go out and break other people's hearts to feel like they healed their own.

Why would the world create such a backwards representation of love? Maybe to keep a whole bunch of heartbroken people paying for apps they think will bring them true love, but it brings them lust. Maybe to take money from those heartbroken people when they need medication to treat their std's or cancers that developed from the std's after they fell for that lust. Or maybe to simply have these heartbroken people chasing dopamine rushes within that same media that told you lust was love, only to be led to advertisements to spend...more...money.

Albert Einstein's theory of special relativity stated that since mass depends on light to become energy and when there is no light, there's no mass, therefore love is the only energy that exists in the dark. Love is the fourth dimension. This is a hypothesis formed after watching "Interstellar". Are we diminishing love because of our absence from darkness?

I am calling lgbs. Naturally, our one mission in life is to reproduce. It is the point of our life. If we don't invent or innovate something for future generations, we can at least create that future generation. If the whole world turns gay, the image of that future generation starts to get very transparent, almost like its not even there. Well, is it there? So many people don't even want to have kids and Coronavirus has everyone masturbating online, so this image really is as transparent as I thought.

They say, "but everyone should be free to love who they want." I agree, but is your mind really free when humans are so influenced by the screens? We have all heard it before, you are who you hang out with; a product of your environment. Pretty much, if you eat a bag of hot cheetos, your crap will be flamin' hot as well. In 2021, humans have become notifications. Yes, our product of what we have become as a human race are notification tools. We get incentivized with money and popularity to relay mainstream messages amongst each other so companies can profit. They say, "but those companies create jobs, and give us the things we need." God gives us the things we need.

Those companies lobby for leaders to imperialize land and steal those resources to sell to us for profit, any business's number one goal; to maximize profit. If we didn't have to pay such high prices for things, we wouldn't need so many jobs to keep people alive. Then more of us would have time to create art, which is now being created in factories by machines. I think all of us have felt love from some form of art in our lives, because art is an expression of love.

I'm not talking about a dopamine draining Cardi B music video; art like a painting, a book, poem, or instrumental. These are things that not only spread love, but knowledge as well. More art means more love, as high prices mean high interest rates. The easiest most passive form of income is lending. The best definition for it is what we all do with our limited life time thinking we will get it back, because that is what the system teaches us. We give our attention, our love, our focus, now even our freedom to the screens, the things, and the jobs. However, we can never get back the sight of the first steps and first words that we miss because we are distracted by things that don't matter once it is your time to go. When you are not present for those moments in life that matter to the people that matter, it leaves scars that last for eternity.

Love and hate are the two sides of the seesaw. Remember the seesaw? Also, remember the grey area between black and white? Black represents the hate, as white represents the love, or vice versa since somebody could get their feelings hurt. In all of the holy books God is mentioned as being the most forgiving, because we all know that as humans, sometimes we slip. We make mistakes; but if that seesaw tilts on the side of the mistakes, that means we never learn from them.

Life sure is long enough for us to realize how to fix our most common mistakes. It is a fact that 90 percent of our 60,000 daily thoughts repeat the following day. Therefore, it is only common sense to think we naturally repeat some mistakes. Imagine if at 60 years old, your thoughts were still like you at 18. That is why we cannot keep repeating mistakes.

Remember how I said we have possibly been holding the mark of the beasts in our palms this entire time? I mean, a primary problem in the world is that couples are becoming suspicious of each other because of passcodes. With constant access to social media and dating apps, humans will much more easily cheat today than ever before. Just a command away. Literally. "Alexa, give me a mistress." No wife is going to have her legs spread nor attention on you 24/7.

As humans, we all have a conscious and a subconscious. Our subconscious is like the safety deposit boxes in the bank. It is a vault full of memories. The awareness of these social media and dating apps existing are stuck inside of your subconscious mind forever. Since humans seek connection, it pushes us to go into that same safety deposit box over and over again when our love account is at zero. Especially when brainwashed to do so for profit, typically, because of convenience. Humans love convenience. Do you not love convenience?

To start a thought process, your brain taps into your subconscious and walks to the closest safety deposit box, because our brains like convenience as well. So if you are sitting in the living room and your spouse is on the opposite end of the couch with their phone turned away from you, your mind will think suspicious thoughts at some point; especially if there is a passcode on their phone.

This suspicious thought can take over our actions, just as any thought that we let snowball in our minds. So even if there is nothing going on behind the screen, tension is created; but remember how easy it is for something to happen behind the screen. The screen can be a dangerous thing for children as well. There are pornographic videos all over youtube, and they can ruin a child's innocent youth. Has thinking about the opposite sex not been a headache to you? The younger they start the more powerful that headache becomes. However, we shouldn't think about things we cannot control.

One thing we can control is our peace of mind. Right now, it is being drained for corporate profit to skyrocket for companies such as Apple. The tool the devil used to trick Eve has tricked women everywhere. It has exploited their insecurities even more than Maybelline. Not to mention, the plandemic has turned a lot of men into perverts and a lot of women into social media prostitutes. I don't blame them, they are being told to socially distance. Where are we going to go if we cannot go into our social world? Into the virtual one, of course. It is the closest safety deposit box.

Since Apple has faced much criticism and not taken a more righteous route, the only way to fight back is to spread the knowledge that we, the people are being ripped of our peace of mind because of passcodes.

Knowledge is the only thing that can defeat material, as they are each respectively God's tool and man's tool. Privacy within families creates problems, any psychologist will tell you this. Love is associated with openness. You cannot give a hug with your arms crossed, can you?

These problems would eventually lead to more social distancing and more material focus. More material focus leads you back to Apple's material products. Do you get it now? For their next commercial slogan I would recommend, "Privacy, so hackers won't steal the million dollars in your account that you will never have because of us."

If we replaced the word Jesus with "knowledge" in the holy books, wouldn't it make more sense for knowledge to have saved you from your sins versus another human being? No other human being is burdened with the responsibility of another, not even prophets. Just as you cannot die to save another human being from their sins, but your knowledge can. Knowledge could be “the son” because knowledge lives through generations.

If you were given a choice to either go work for someone or stay at home and make money naked, I think I know what a majority of people would choose. Why not? Unfortunately, this is a very popular option being given to young females nowadays with Onlyfans. Onlyfans is a platform that masks itself as a general entertainment platform, but there is no other entertainment people love to get live online more than naked women. 70 percent.

Since we live in a world dominantly spent in the virtual world, men are being led to become perverted because finding the fix online is the most convenient thing to do and the concept of love is diminishing. How could one ever love another if we start to observe each other solely through the desire to have our needs fulfilled?

A child gets on Youtube to be entertained, then views ads for social media or the influence of social media inside of the entertainment on youtube. Then the child gets on social media, and views ads for dating apps or the influence of dating apps through the things people post. Then the child gets on a dating app because as humans we seek all possible connections if they are presented to us, it is only natural. It is as natural as the curiosity that guides those decisions. Then the child sees ads for Onlyfans or the influence of Onlyfans through the bios of the females only trying to make money as conveniently as possible. The route for the child to go from something rated g to xxx is beyond easy now, but it is just a few of the rabbit holes we are exposed to.

Should it be called the new norm if this is the normal picture we have been creating for the past two decades with the normality of us sharing so much to so many people? One of our chart toppers is blatantly pushing for prostitution with lyrics like "There's some whores in this house." This normality has been pushed by the mainstream music we listen to and what we watch on apps like Youtube. Why?

A woman can be a man's greatest success or a man's greatest distraction. The one that is a success is called a success because she brings the man success. As the man focuses on his goals, he cannot have a woman laying around waiting for his attention. Then there won't be any success, only distraction. So why are we training our girls to grow into women now not only feeding themselves attention, but feeding their stomachs with the income that attention brings?

History has shown man’s greatest distraction has been porn, another rabbit hole. I mean 70 percent of the internet is porn. It is like water to our existence. Porn could be the devil’s water, if a physical devil existed. Even the presence of a devil takes away from the almightiness of God, therefore a presence of a devil cannot exist. Haven’t you ever heard of metaphor?

If little girls grow up having embedded in them that huge rewards come with making their cats happy through sexual exploitation, and little boys grow up making the dog inside of them happy with happy cats, then we will start to live in a world where women will fear going into public because the dogs will be loose on the streets. But this will send them back to the screen, so this problem becomes a growing black hole that is consuming more and more of those little girls. These could be our daughters being manipulated.

As far as distractions go, eventually these men won't have enough money to even pay for this 'entertainment' because the world will be full of dogs looking for cats instead of men looking for success. This makes it easy for Bill Gates to take over every industry as a college dropout since there is nobody that is focused enough to compete with him anymore. Or has that already happened? The good news is that the black hole can be locked and unlocked, but also tossed away. That black hole is the screen.

Porn can be another std, sexually transmitted demon. Demons supposedly consume our mind, like what these constant urges for the dopamine rushes do to our ability to focus. If we lose our focus we lose our prosperity, therefore we lose our freedom and fall back into the slavehood called capitalism.

Porn can be viewed as a rabbit hole as well. If we are all being trained to seek comfort through dopamine rushes, then the more we find them the more comfort we want. If life is limitless and exists after death, then why would our tolerance not be? I use the word tolerance because the dissatisfaction is proven in our consumption of prescription drugs, alcohol, and tobacco.

They say "you are the product of your environment", as your poop burns after eating hot cheetos. Chances are, if our environment is filled with rabbit holes, our minds will get used to seeking the next hole. Aren't the chances higher of contracting std's for somebody who continuously seeks new holes?

These std's can be life threatening, or threaten one's ability to produce life. One of the most common ones, HPV, often causes cervical cancer in women. HPV is something that can be carried without any symptoms and transmitted simply by skin to skin contact. There is more HPV strains than there is of marijuana, about 150. This is why condoms are only 33 percent effective in preventing std's...when they are worn; but I think any human would agree, the feeling of not wearing one doesn't compare closely to wearing one. And don't forget about the curiosity God gave us, human beings. Or the convenience factor, like in situations where the fire is burning inside of you both after midnight but you ran out of condoms.

Maybe now you understand why I call them demons. Today, the bridge between even the news and porn is so short; just a sidebar click away. However, the bridge between porn and contracting std's is becoming short as well because we are being trained to follow the rabbit holes. Both do their fair part in making humans unproductive members of society, by creating embarrassment and taking away motivation. Imagine being the one showing up to a party with a shirt saying Coronavirus positive. That comes solely from an individual perspective.

From a family perspective, much tension is built when jealousy comes between couples, jealousy that is often created through porn, remember? Whether it be tension, embarrassment, or lack of motivation, all three toss us into a life of loneliness where we have to seek fulfillment through our screens again; like a sinking black hole.

If media is brainwashing us into ‘falling in love’ from such an early age through even shows on Disney Channel, wouldn't there be more business headed in the way of Planned Parenthoods or supermarkets for diapers? Shows like “That's So Raven” or “Even Stevens”, which represent those first encounter lustful moments as ones of a fairy tale, influenced most millennial Americans.

Whether you're American or not, we are all born with the same ego driven curiosity. Curiosity often leads to a discovery, which leads to a dopamine rush. If we chase curiosity, we begin to live a life within rabbit holes. Yeah, those same rabbit holes that have been taught to us at least since I have been in the USA in the past 20 years; a rabbit hole such as condoms. Condoms, which can easily get placed on hold for convenience, remember?

These rabbit holes can even be rabbit holes of knowledge, on the bright side. Or you can say on the opposite side of the seesaw. However, a true scholar doesn't chase rabbit holes of knowledge. A true scholar knows that his/her intent to learn will bring about information through destiny. Such destiny is also how God brings about a woman for every man, and a man for every woman, to fulfill nature's duty in reproduction. Don't you think of the destination before you think of how to get there? God already knows entire generations of lineages up ahead.

So why have most of our young women put their entire focus on being "chose" by a man. Also, our young men are being taught to chase women because of the sexual exploitation they put out by wearing such revealing clothing, as I explained earlier. As a man, I have also noticed in my life that some women like to be in control. I'm assuming it is since the 'princess factor' is becoming more prevalent nowadays as dads spoil their daughters with Elsa accessories. Aren't those princesses the star of the show? However in relationships, both sides have to keep the seesaw balanced.

Has the inclusion of so many conveniently controllable devices given women the power the princess inside of them has always desired? No man has ever been so responsive! Especially the voice controlled ones can easily fool our brains into tossing out commands to our friends or in any social interactions. Talking has always been exclusive to how humans communicate with humans. How can we talk properly with masks on our mouths? Some people need to read lips.

Maybe this is why the hierarchy in the world has gotten so screwed up. We have so many princesses strutting around feeling like the control they have at their thumbs should be reciprocated in the workplace. They mix this craving for control with authority, which can often lead companies and (worst of all) schools in the wrong direction, internally if not with the public.

Let me put it in an easy scenario. You come home one day to see your spouse in bed with another person of the opposite sex. What would be most people's first instinct? They would lose their mind of course; but in that moment if you do not have control of yourself, someone could easily end up injured, if not dead. Either of those events lead to severe punishment such as at least jail time. Nobody wants jail time. So in that scenario, a person whose actions are more emotionally driven, such as a woman would react way quicker than a logically driven man would in thinking about consequences of the next steps. Because of scenarios like this, women in highly executive positions are a fragile move for a workplace hierarchy.

But imagine if you walk in on your spouse with a member of the lgbtq+ army. I should add a ‘premium’ too. You yell, "I can't believe you're with her right now!" Then a subargument emerges about the pronoun that should be used versus the fact of the matter. That is exactly what is being done by mainstream media and government policies like The Equality Act, fueling the creation of more and more brainwashed youth into experimenting their way into std's and insecurities. These insecurities are caused by the same system sexually exploiting women, leading them to compete to be the next best twerker. On the other hand, they might leave because of the urge for new attention as a reciprocation of what social media has done to their subconcious. A lot of the time however, a child is left without a parent, leading to insecurities of an unbalanced childhood. Children require proper working seesaws to be happy don't they?

If anybody has a hole, they look to fill it. If a woman doesn't think she is beautiful enough, she will go buy makeup. If a man thinks his muscles are not big enough, he will lift weights. Both that man and woman are ultimately modifying themselves to step back into a society where they feel belonging. Belonging fills the holes in our hearts, often through attention. They only want attention as we all do, maybe some they missed on one side of the seesaw. So, as a man with bigger muscles and a woman with sexier make up gets more attention than average human beings, our kids are given an opportunity to belong when they feel like they don't. This opportunity though is equivalent to a pyramid scheme where you invest your soul and never get a return on investment.

So many people loom with confused minds and hearts being pulled in by the line the zionists' media hook casts. Don't the 'Jews' control Hollywood? The reason why I put it in quotes is because the ones propagating the state of Israel aren't the real chosen people. They are actually of the complete opposite. All you have to do is look at Palestine then and now, then Israel then and now. Israel's seesaw is sky high, and you can guess how far from the ground Palestine's is.

The profit for entities like planned parenthood only grows with options like artificial insemination. Not to mention, marriage events and divorce attorneys can rip wallets apart. So a lot of people just shake hands with the courthouse and change their profile picture; but isn't the point of a wedding day to recite vows that promise eternal compassion to another human being in front of the closest people, so a sense of responsibility can be established. A sense of investment you could say, but how can marriages keep their true meaning when most of what we invest in nowadays is material and ultimately loses meaning through advancement. Love can never lose meaning. There has never been a level one, two, or three in love. If there is no meaning, no responsibility, nor investment, humans will want to ride new seesaws because of our egos.

Chapter 14: WHY Interest?

The last twenty years, zionists fooled you by getting rid of two towers so they can profit off of the eastern world, now they are fooling you by talking about the eastern world while putting up towers to profit off of you. Life has become a mental maze for everyone. Nobody knows where they are going, and they probably end up hurting whoever gets in their way because capitalism tells them to. At least the American style does. The American style that is the world's leader.

Hollywood has a global audience. And don't be fooled, CNN is just down the street. Then Al Jazeera is just down the street from CNN. Even if they were based in Saudi Arabia, the Saudis are working together with the U.S. to kill muslims...doesn't seem like a very muslim thing to do. I don't think any religion says it is ok to kill your own people. Something doesn't add up here. Did you know what the word muslim even meant in arabic? It doesn't mean to be split up into two sects and fight amongst each other. It means Believer. In a world full of abundance, it seems that true believers have gone scarce.

We've become rats that race to buy something because everyone else is. However, when truth is brought out against that possession, tempers flare. You don't want to have wasted your money. Its like a gym membership that costs $150 at Lifetime Fitness, to force you to use what you paid for. Is that how Netflix has become so popular? Because autopay is on? Is it really worth it? A yearly subscription is worth a round trip ticket to Cancun, after Coronavirus though. Why watch Narcos when you can live it?

Remember dopamine? Sense of accomplishment, happiness so to say. If we get so much of it from Netflix, there becomes no need to go seek it in real God given life. Why have we become so scared of that life, while the virtual one seems to provide us with such warm shelter? Many bow their head in virtual submission as soon as an awkward moment arises in life by pulling their phone out, but they never bow their head to their creator.

Remember the law of attraction? Every thought produces an aspect of reality. As much as your outer world influences you, you can influence it as well; but if all of our thoughts were trained to believe that the world was destined to fail, wouldn't we bring that reality into existence? If you were stuck in the middle of the Sahara desert, wouldn't you have a higher chance of giving up if someone told you there was no water within a thousand miles vs there was within one?

How would a world so abundant in resources end if we didn't kill off those resources to sell replicas at inflated prices? Unfortunately, that is the world we live in, one big ‘get rich quick’ scheme called capitalism. Remember, it is easiest to profit off of somebody at their expense instead of at their gain. I mean on an accounting ledger, there is debits and credits, for the sake of the balance of the seesaw. So isn't capitalism destined to fail society?

Another belief that eastern cultures share is that interest is forbidden. Interest through taxation, a made up number charged to us in the products we buy and the paychecks we get. Interest through banks. As obvious as this one is, there exists the interest that companies have to pay as well. Then of course they would cover that cost through you, the customer, causing even higher prices; a domino effect of inflation. Inflation the markup of prices based on the inflow of money. Haven't you noticed prices increased since we all started getting stimulus checks? Gas prices have increased by more than 30 percent in the past year.

Why would I hate a system that allows me to get into a car with a low downpayment and only $200 a month? Or into a house for only a couple of thousand dollars? Or free airline miles to take that trip to cancun and technically not ever have to pay it back and still stay alive, healthy, and out of jail? Or even save 75 bucks on amazon by just signing up. Oh so simple.

Let's look at it from the other perspective. If I didn't use interest, I would have to earn at least hundreds of thousands of dollars to afford all of these things I want and need instead of enjoying their luxury for just a single digit fraction of the full price. How would a person earn hundreds of thousands of dollars? Well I'm not sure but there are hundreds of thousands of ways. If another human being can do it, why can't you? And if they get it , that means more is on the way. Don't you make more layups after you get the first one in? Would you teach your child to get good grades by buying them toys before the exams?

Remember Bob? Let's say Bob uses interest. Bob would be satisfied earning $30,000 per year to pay off his home, car, and credit cards, while the person that pays straight cash would be earning more than ten times that and fully owning that home and car. Then if another plandemic struck, the other guy wouldn't have to worry about how to keep a roof over his head while Bob would. Why? Because good things come to those who wait, like humility.

Spoiler alert: Here's America's top business secret; to sell the lesser of two evils. In the right hand there is a political party that fuels invasions abroad, but the national motives are very logical. In the left hand, there is a political party that plays victim in order to connect to the majority of humans who think with their emotions. After all, isn't our ego fueled by attention and doesn't a baby get the most of it after it starts crying? It's only natural. This political party in the left hand is also fueling the same invasions, just not as publically like siding with the NRA for weapons production. Actors for this side such as Barack Obama fund wars in muslim countries while the other side points fingers as if he is one of them, how ironic.

Who do you choose to side with? Well, I don't want to make it seem like I am an a-hole that doesn't care about victims. Now I am too busy figuring out whether to be an ahole or a victim that I completely forgot about the invasions and the innocent people being killed overseas for the profit of the parties in both hands. Don’t forget hands are always connected to a body.

Same case for interest, either you pay a high cash price or pay a lower down payment now and a really high cash price down the road. There goes another business secret. Sell to the instant gratification that humans seek. We are all brought up in a world full of pain that causes us all to just want to feel something. So if I want to feel the thrill of having that new car, house or taking that trip to Cancun, why would I wait? Because I would pay less? But then the businesses would make less. That is not what they put in their advertisements, "We want to make less".

That is also why somebody whose thinking seesaw tips more on the emotional side rather than the logical side, such as a woman, wouldn't be as good as a more logical thinker at trading stocks. Only logic can defeat the animalistic side of us that seeks instant gratification. This is why if you google image the stock trading floor on Wall Street, it will be mostly men.

Ever wanted to know where republicans and democrats came from? Let's say you are shopping around for a car. I have two available. They are the same car, just a different color, so I have a reason to price them differently. For example, call the blue one premium or even premium plus as opposed to the black. Premium yields a non premium, and premium plus yields a premium and a non premium. Just as a creation yields to a creator. Now you tell me this is the first dealership you have stepped in, and I offer you both above market value because I now know you aren't too familiar with the pricing. First I present the blue one at a marked up premium price then the black one at a lower yet still marked up price. It seems like a steal compared to the premium price. Wouldn't you be a bit more motivated to go with the decision to get the black car as opposed to if the blue premium car wasn't there at all?

According to many business psychology books such as "Exactly What To Say" by Phil Jones, you would. It is called the 'lesser of two evils' concept. Since humanity wasn't always this materially complicated, it was much easier for people to spot the logical and emotional sides of the brain (left and right respectively) in human beings. It is funny how the political right and left are the opposite. Therefore it was always known that humans were born parted in two. So why not exploit it as humans have everything else?

I mean what would fun be if there was no boring? What would happiness be if there was no sadness? What would death be if there was no life? What would tell the emotional side to not chase dopamine rabbit holes if there was no logic? And what gives the logical side the feeling of life if there was no emotion? Who would profit off of us if the economy didn't exist?

God created the universe symmetrical and reciprocal. The Creator has a creation, and every piece of that creation can be cut right down the middle into two equals. How fun would a team scrimmage be to watch as opposed to a game versus another team?

It is basic reciprocity. Like the old testament and the new testament, sadly to say, another business scheme to make you believe something incorrect to be true. The concept of old and new testament also causes one to think that Christians and Jews are of a different people, and to take attention away from the Christians settling in Palestinian land. Suppose there is a criminal lineup for a witness to choose the perpetrator and the police bring in 9 people from the same family with the perp being one of these 9, then a random 10th suspect. How likely is the witness to choose the 10th suspect as opposed to a situation where there are two people in the lineup in total? That is 10 percent versus 50 percent.

So if I was an entity seeking to profit off of my consumer, it would be expected of me to give the consumer false information in order to confuse them to make them more easily decievable, like stores' left sided entries and exits that go opposite of traffic. I would put eight other branches of false information to take attention away from the one pure message. Such as Christian denominations like baptist, lutheran, piscopalian, adventist, mormon, jehova, prezbitarian, and catholic, which itself is stemmed into orthodox and protestant. Unfortunately, even islam branched into two due to human politics. Some say it was a diversion to the muslim people by hidden powers.

Speaking of politics, if I were a leader of a nation seeking to imperialize another nation, I think my most efficient route to do it with minimal world resistance would be to distract that world. Since they would point their finger at you if you are doing wrong, the logical thing to do would be to simply move their finger into a different direction, preferably the direction of an enemy. Eventually, the enemy will be too busy fending off their fingers that they won't be able to focus on yours anymore.

Unexpectedly and unprecedentedly in 2020, a new form of imperialism emerged beyond any evil committed in the middle east due to zionists. I think every human on the planet can conclude that screens have become the number one advertising platform for businesses. Anybody wants to be as rich as possible, it is human nature. If I am a leader of a nation, I can get really really rich with the tools in my arsenal. Especially if these businesses that make money through advertisements come to me with billions of dollars like Apple, Tesla, Google, Microsoft, Amazon and Facebook did to the leaders of the Divided States of America. Since these businesses make more money with more advertisements, and since I am a human I want more money, the end goal would be to get my consumers exposed to more advertisements to yield the most profit. I think we can all collectively conclude everything that has happened in the past year since Coronavirus began has led all of humanity to more screen time.

Elon musk said it himself in plenty of interviews, "Humans will live in an autonomous world by 2021." The rise of technology always sounded like unicorns and rainbows until it started taking people's jobs. Oh yeah they said Coronavirus caused unemployment, among everything else. If this were true, then a proper conjecture to form would be that 5G technology or Coronavirus could be causes because they both arrived at the same point in history, while both have logical means of causing unemployment. Coronavirus caused less consumerism, less consumerism led to less profit, less profit led to budget cuts, and budget cuts led to lay offs.

From the other perspective, 5G caused autonomous machines to carry out tasks at the efficiency of humans in places such as airplanes which started landing and taking off in autopilot with the help of 5G technology. This just led directly to layoffs because a business wouldn't throw their money away, would they? I mean if most of them even donate to charity, it is to their own accounts only to take advantage of tax write offs, like the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

Come on, we knew we would get here at some point. That scene with Will Smith from "Irobot" is coming to fruition, where the robots are taking over. What would humans have left to do if we didn't have a job to go to? Seems like modern history has shown that it would be either to masturbate online, shoot each other in real life or video games (but we see how interphysical the two are getting), or notify each other of new trends, which we are notified about through those four corners in our palms. I think most humans would rather pursue a purpose in life other than seeking dopamine rush after dopamine rush for an allowance. The world economic forum put it perfectly within the slogan for the "Great Reset". It goes, "You will own nothing and you will be happy." Aren't we the happiest in that moment when dopamine is being drained from our brain and don't we feel empty spiritually once it is gone?

So since most humans would probably not want to become dopamine hamsters on a profit wheel that doesn't belong to them, the international and business leaders that want to profit as the human beings they are will probably not care. Especially if they follow a book that says they will be forgiven of their sins with a simple statement.

My next step would be to figure out how we can cover up this shift of unemployment, electromagnetic activity, and virtual reality. Well, the biggest effects of Coronavirus are supposedly job loss, sickness, and social distancing. Many leaked videos have appeared of doctors saying they have received communication from the CDC with monetary incentives for Coronavirus pronounced cases.

Now that I have the illusion of credibility from beneficiaries like Fauci, who we cannot credit with the title of doctor because of the lies he is obviously sharting out regarding masks, I can start the dividing and conquering. At the same time, the middle east has been reduced to dust to take life away from the only people left that spend too much time looking up to not notice the changes around them. I would say relatively, muslims are the least materialistic people. We can take the U. S. as an example of fantastic divide and conquer techniques, since they lead the world in political structure with two party systems. Democrats and republicans; the right and the left.

Since we are talking about imperialism, I have these international interests as well as national ones, since I'm hypothetically now the president of the U.S. If I flip two coins, there are four outcomes possible. Heads, heads. Heads, tails. Tails, heads. Tails, tails. Every great car salesman knows the best time to take advantage of a customer is when they are confused, so let the confusion begin.

America is made up of the ancestors of the conquistador Europeans, Africans, Hispanics, Asians, equally. For the sake of keeping symmetry, let's pair them into national whites and international minorities. Then I would pair up national truth with international lies. Hand it to the republicans on the right. Then hand over national lies and international, let's say more honest lies to the democrats. The possible outcomes are national truth/international semi truth, national truth/international lies, national lies/international semi truth, or national/international lies. National and International lies would completely blow my cover, we don't want to tell the truth because what we're doing is wrong for humanity.

Since I know there are logical people in my country, I have to appeal to them so they have something to follow. However since they don't live internationally, I can lie to them about what I am doing across borders. On the other hand I have emotional people as well, the side more easily influenced because it is proven that women are more easily influenced than men are. If they're more easily influenced, then they're more easily lied to as well. Aren't women more naïve? Genius plan. Are you ready?

I will tell my truth telling right to also be a little racist to cause tension with minorities so they can have more of a reason to be made into suspects to the left. Through brands I will make the world believe the right and left are the only two options. For example, brands are invented to trademark someone's product. It represents a business, and you represent the business if you represent the brand, i.e. wearing Nike or Adidas clothing. People want to fit in. If there was just one option for people to choose, nobody would feel special. That is why God created races of people from the thin eyed to the mocha skinned.

So if the brands you see all over advertising platforms only show you a left and a right, you will eventually want to feel special too. A lot of people I knew who hated on politics once are posting about how they voted in the past elections. I never see it go the other way though, like Christians converting to islam. Those propaganda videos that show a "muslim to Christian" convert are as comic to me as Saturday Night Live skits. Anybody who looks inside of the books can see for themselves, so propaganda is done to just get your blood boiling before you get a chance to.

I will divide the country into half donkeys and half elephants spread out among the states. I will create news outlets for both the left and the right. 9 similar suspects to make any other news outlet be the invisible 10th. That is 9 on each side to cause even more confusion. If your cable box had 20 channels, wouldn't you believe the 18 telling a lie because it is 18 vs 2? Then I would let these 18 news stations spread their half truths to cause more confusion. Under them I would use the help of my zionist Israeli allies to spread the same propaganda the news stations do, but in one entity called Hollywood. Something like the trinity from Christianity. Aren't all movies including some sort of pro alcohol, pro tobacco, pro gun, pro violence, pro fast driving, pro sex, pro drug or pro travel message that feeds my alcohol, gun, entertainment, automobile, fertility, pharmaseutical, or tourism industries?

Never forget that the pawns I used to be the face of these businesses that I eventually profit from. They don't want to lose their jobs just as you don't. If you need to get on the roof of your house, wouldn't you get there easier if the ladder reached all the way to it vs only to the window? But if you only had a ladder that reached to the top of the window or the bottom of the window, wouldn't you use the one that reached to the top of the window? Old testament, new testament.

Why would Jesus have been okay with murdering innocent people and seizing their homes? The story of him is based on someone who stood against these people who committed such inhumane acts. The old testament is an imperialistic excuse in formal writing, with verses like Deuteronomy 20:10. "When you go near a city to fight against it, then proclaim an offer of peace to it. And it shall be that if they accept your offer of peace, and open to you, then all the people who are found in it shall be placed under tribute to you, and serve you." This sounds exactly like the hypocrisy that Israeli zionists are using to justify their actions in Palestinian territory. “Innocent blood" however, as mentioned later in Deuteronomy 21:9, is forgiven by the "lord". The new testament gives the polytheistic message that both The Creator and a human are both God. "I and the father are one." John 10:30. From a non religious perspective, isn't a person with a really high ego likely to see themself as a god? And the ego is considered a bad thing right? Is the Bible one entity formed out of a ‘lesser of two evils’ with an old testament like Fox News and a new testament like CNN spreading a set of half truths?

Chapter 15: WHY Capitalism?

Checks and balances is a system which we learned in school was responsible for making sure one government function doesn't abuse its power. Seems to me like it is not working. Well, how is it supposed to when these systems of government have handed over their dirty work to the corporations that fund them? Then those corporations get bailed out when, for example, they censor free speech or spy on consumers, with the Earn It Act and the Patriot Act, respectively. Didn't the devil trick Eve with the apple?

It is unfortunate to see that humanity has gotten to the point of enslaving its race mentally with such propaganda driven policies like critical race theory being taught in school. This is another example of something psychologically disruptable. If a couple went to a therapist to fix their issues, wouldn't the therapist seek a comprimisational solution for the future and not a regressive finger pointing match? Who is checking and balancing here? Media, government, and tech corporations? Yeah, getting your checks and increasing their balances over a lot of material things God didn't create us for; but if you get enough of the advertising into your subconscious, then you will eventually start to believe it. I'm sure I am not the only one that knows people who started out anti Coronavirus to eventually get vaccinated. Propaganda is a powerful force.

Would it be a fair assumption to think that if a majority of people wanted something to be changed in their government (which is what a democracy is supposed to be), then government leaders would be completely transparent about changing it? This is why splitting up governments into parties is a great idea. It becomes foolproof that the people can never defeat the greedy capitalist elites if that side is nonexistent through the illusion of two sides of a court. Can both teams ever win one NBA game? Three party and so forth systems would be flawed because then the majority can be more easily established. If there are 50 percent odds on both sides, then the losing side never has grounds to say they are a majority and in a democracy majority rules. They never have grounds to even open their mouths to unite against corrupt laws because of the 50 percent concept placing us in two corners sociologically. If there were let's say three parties instead of two, then the two losing parties can join together to be 60 versus 30. Not to mention masks destroying our will to communicate with each other. Now, two more corners are being drawn with vaccinated and non vaccinated. With everybody in corners, nobody can step to the center of the ring and knockout the oppressors.

Two thousand years after Jesus (pbuh) died to profess to us that God is natural and to stay away from the materialistic world, that materialistic world has enslaved us. That material world thrives off of the concept of capitalism, creating a world full of car dealerships selling technology, homes, furniture, prescription medication, clothes, education, money, even cars themselves. Haven't you been to a car dealership before? Remember the dealership situation in the last chapter with the reasoning for premium pricing. If there is a premium, there must be a non premium. Remember reciprocity. It is a simple trick Biden and the democratic representatives have implemented in the continuous mandates of masks in public if you are unvaccinated.

They offer one most profitable choice and another less profitable one to give an impression that the choice to not play by the rules of the dealership doesn't exist. I understand the perspective of the ones saying if you are inside the dealership then you must play by their rules. Let's use an analogy of dying in a car crash that represents dying from Coronavirus, even though doctors have been confusing the two on their reports. If the dealership is changing the entire showroom procedure over a .1 percent chance of their customer dying in a crash, wouldn't the Better Business Bureau start asking questions immediately?

That's right. Only about a tenth of a percent of Americans have died of Coronavirus since the sharades began. Of a population of 300,000,000, only around 1,000,000 people have died. That is about three tenths of a percent, or a three in a thousand chance. I think we need to do a better job of hiring the teachers in our math departments nationwide, people seem to have never learned the concept of probability. Even the probability of dying from liver disease caused by alcoholism or getting into an actual car crash because of screen addiction are way higher than dying from shaking hands with someone.

Next time you walk into a corporate business and see a sign that tells you to wear a mask if you are unvaccinated, think about what the Better Business Bureau would say. Instead of BBB, let's think about why we are taking advice from one of the top businessmen in the world leading a health organization. History has shown us Bill Gates' main intention is to profit from us. It is any businessman's main goal, especially when that businessman doesn't believe in God. It is pretty safe to simply assume so because of the business he has been in. Not to mention what he has done to the African kids with vaccines in prior years (killed thousands). Bill Gates has enslaved us for the past two decades in a God like alternate virtual advertising universe called Microsoft Windows, why say he won't find other means of enslaving us going forward? The guy even highly recommended a book called "Superintelligence" by Nick Bostrom, which is about artificial intelligence taking over.

I always sensed that life insurance has been an evil industry to work in, since the setting you are trying to portray in the sales pitch is death. I was wrong initially, which I realized a year after Coronavirus media enslaved humanity. The real reason is because it gives families the excuse of thinking about each other's death as a positive outcome, leading to intrapersonal issues because it creates negative energy amongst them; just another deceptive capitalist business that ruins humanity. Sure, we want to focus on death spiritually because we want to prepare for what awaits. If we focus on death monetarily, then when we all fall into holes as human beings the last thing we want to be thinking about is what family member to exterminate. I cannot imagine how often the thought has been looming with death being sensed by all of us after 2020. A closer death means a lot of people would sacrifice absolutely anything to achieve quicker material wealth to feel 'alive'. Pressure busts pipes. If the world had a seesaw of good and evil that Coronavirus has caused, which side do you think life insurance would be a weight on?

Just a week before writing this chapter, Israel employed their 'lesser of two evils' prime minister, Naftali Bennet. To someone who is just scrolling through Youtube or seeing news reports, now Israel is making itself seem to be like any run of the mill country, holding two party elections just like us here in the good old Divided States. And just as any run of the mill country had protests in the past year because the media and government instigated events such as Coronavirus restrictions and 'black lives matter' rallies, so did Israel. Only in their case, it was people protesting innocent murder, ethnic cleansing, destruction of property, and broken human rights laws.

Wait, but doesn't that sound exactly like what is going on here? Now, in order to not undermine what black brothers and sisters are going through, we go back to the organizational or individual debate. In the U.S., the topics have polarized themselves on the side of Coronavirus regulations and black lives matter, respectively. Stay at home orders, mask mandates, and vaccine passports are issues the government has created. The media don't focus on the fact that more black people are becoming criminals and on how to prevent it.

First they set the example through Hollywood's greatest music videos, shows and movies for a whole race to be criminals by advertising blacks with drugs, alcohol, guns, and prostitutes. Just the way that the african american and a cop interaction on screenplays is shown scares the crap out of black people and cops everywhere. However, it is simply a compilation of individual unrelated events which can be easily reciprocated with the innocent white lives lost as well. There wouldn't be any black cops if police racism was systematic, right? I mean that would be a whole lot of sell outs.

While humanity collectively takes to the streets to stand up for what they believe in and what is truly right, we not only start to bring focus to things other than the true systematic oppression going on in the occupied land of Palestine, but we also equalize and confuse their organizational struggle with the compilation of individual black injustices. If people were so keen on taking down police stations during the riots that took place, I wonder what they would have done to the media stations for playing all of them like pawns in a chess game so the imperialism can continue in other places without a care. To average people, the protestors fighting for their land are just doing run of the mill things, to post about it on social media, go to sleep, then move on the next day like what most of us did after the George Floyd incident.

As most biblically dominant countries are inclined to imperialize without guilt, standing behind 'scripture' like Deuteronomy Ch. 9, why are the ones being imperialized being called the 'terrorists'? Shouldn't it be the other way around? Oh yeah, a liar will point fingers to keep their lie a secret. While the U.S. government seems to shift from one side to the other going from a republican leader to a 'democratic' one, Israel's new leader only commits more evil. Bennet stands firmly by the belief that God is permitting what would be let's say constant murders of George Floyds in Palestine.

Since there isn't a limit on wealth in capitalism, then why would there be a limit on property? Let's use socialism as the best possible alternative for the people. A socialist would be content with the land he receives and would focus on how it can be divided evenly amongst people. A capitalist would just want more land, because it would lead to more profit. So isn't capitalism the more concrete threat here? I would like to point out that while capitalism surely inspires imperialism, it is not the same vice versa. If I want to acquire land, I may eventually spread it evenly amongst the people as a socialist, but if my goal is to profit, I will surely seek to acquire more land to do it with.

Neo had it really tough in the movie “The Matrix". This bald black guy reaches him by surprise with an offer to save his life if he accepts the offer, similar to Samuel Jackson in the Capital One Credit card commercials. He promises a new life inside of the Matrix, a.k.a the credit system. The matrix really becomes Neo's subconscious going forward just like ours after we enter debt, with bills chasing after us like agents with pistols.

Here is another secret that will turn you into the slow motion scene from the end, money is not real. God created trees, grass, flowers, water, animals, even the oil that gave way to the most powerful currency ever, the American dollar. No, not their own oil obviously. Remember, this government is founded upon imperialism. Ask the native indians. God didn't create money, humans did.

With the oil rush, the United States began their imperialism all around the world. They sent economic hitmen to all of the powerful countries of the world with Israel's help and interest bearing incentives, then destroyed them from the inside out. The oil rush plus the automobile industry sent big bucks into the pockets of not only the USA but Germany, Japan, and the sellouts of Saudi Arabia. Because of these economic hitmen working their wicked magic around the same time as the auto boom, the USA ultimately won by supplying even these strong countries with the oil that they stole from the nations they imperialised in the late 20th century and early 21st. Through the oil supply, the American dollar became the currency that began to rule the world, until China came out with social ranking. Why do you think Trump made the move to nationalize the Federal Reserve?

Why do I call the Saudis sell outs? Also late in the 20th century, The U.S. signed an agreement with Saudi Arabia and supplied the middle east with weapons. Once the area was rich in the real weapons of mass destruction left behind by soldiers who invaded the countries, what else were they going to do with the supplies but create an army to fight back? These people lost their families, homes, jobs, livelihoods. What else did they have?

So, money is made up, just like the 'gain of function' topic being discussed in Congress. If you caught your spouse on a call with another person, wouldn't the most efficient way for your spouse to hide that they are sleeping with that person be to tell you that they were just having lunch together. With that confession, the attention would be taken off of the fact that they are sleeping together and all of the anger would be directed toward why they are having lunch or on a call together in the first place. It goes back to the 50 percent rule. If there is only a lie and a truth ultimately, the confession fills the hole of the truth. So if Fauci 'lied' about gain of function, he could also be a smart liar and be hiding something even more sinister.

Something sinister happening right now is the ruining of the education system over a .3 percent risk. In the past two school years, students' learning has suffered tremendously. They were given a choice to either ruin their health by wearing masks for half the day or to build lazy habits at home staring at a screen for half the day. That sounds like another 'lesser of two evil's to me. Capitalism has taken over schools now too?

Well, maybe it has been more apparent than we think. Most of us just haven't been inside of those walls in a while, the walls the armed forces see as their car dealership. What happened to the common sense option of running things 99 percent normally?

The funny thing is, no matter how many of the corrupt things anyone can expose, there is something new coming out every day. Such as recently in Texas, one of the republican states, mask mandates were lifted in public. Did anything change? No, but mentally we then understood who holds the power. Businesses continued to enforce national laws because their businesses licenses belong to the federal government. Then two months later, the federal government lifts mandates in the case of proper vaccination. Now those people who were eager to live normal lives again become walking advertisements for the vaccines without a choice. The people on the other side of the opinionated spectrum don't see them as someone living freely, but someone who has gotten vaccinated in order to live freely. That's what these foolish rules are branding into our subconscious.

Unfortunately, most of those subconsciouses belong to the minorities brainwashed by the news stations typically appealing to them. At the end of the day, more of the whites are walking around freely as more the minorities are becoming essential slaves, I mean workers. These bosses, officials, and leaders who have been ironically praised for enforcing slavery upon people have become dangerous people in society, pushing their false sense of authority with a false sense of ‘help’. They happily give out free masks, tests, and vaccinations, even fire you at workplaces if you don't agree with them. They think subconsciously that they are doing something good for society when they really aren't. I have my own personal example of being fired from a summer camp for refusal to wear a mask, after it was illegal to enforce in the state of Texas. This is the brainwash I talk about, which is leading to more of a divide between us because of illogical decisions. Could the federal and state governments be another example of a lesser of two evils?

Remember, nothing in life is free, except for credit, so you think. Credit is your monetary reliability. Reliability is relative, as it goes down the less effort you put in. The higher credit you take, the less effort you put in to make money, the less reliable you become, and the longer you stay at the bottom of the pyramid. The ones at the top don't know that the bottom is the foundation, and they are ultimately destroying themselves because there will be no top if there is no foundation. Even if we know all of the dispute and balance transfer tricks with credit in the world, our limited lifetime is meant to do more than play with made up numbers. Our time is the price, or true interest we pay for credit.

Seems like even the government and the churches are checking and balancing more than the judicial, executive, and legislative branches. Again, I mean cashing checks and raising their balances. Churches send a message that it is ok for people to sin, but their sin leads them to business, and business feeds the government. I mean I have to ask this question now since Christians love to ask as well. W.W.J.D? What would Jesus do? Would Jesus seek to feed his ego or help others? To my knowledge, anyone that proclaims they are a god, such as Kanye West, has a higher ego than average. That doesn't sound like God, a selfish egoist. The government needs these churches like media stations need for consumers to have the devices.

Consumers are useless to businesses if they are farming their own crops, and living 'off grid'. They wouldn't be a part of the media, propaganda, sin, food, technology, or inflation that us regular people are a part of. Have you not seen prices rise by over 20 percent in 2021? How much richer can the elite get before they are satisfied? They own egos as well. Maybe there should be a cap at a million and if anything exceeds it has to be given to charity, which isn't founded by the same entity. We could call it controlled capitalism to keep the west happy.

How much richer can the elite get before they start to compete with each other? If two parties are competing, such as if they are pointing fingers at each other, they don't have the attention to focus on what is really going on. With the elites, what's really going on is that they are assuming a huge responsibility over humanity. Instead of living up to that responsibility and doing what is right for the people, they are letting the commission based car dealership capitalist system feed their dopamine rushes.

God, The Creator, created symmetry amongst the creation to prove the law of reciprocity, just as God created water cycles, seasonal cycles, and reproductive cycles to prove that life will come again after death. Businessmen once noticed this symmetry and the natural human addiction to it (because we see it everywhere) and began to exploit it for business. Books became fiction and nonfiction, like The Bible and The Quran, respectively. Then as they turned one god into three, a credit score was divided into three brands, equifax, experian, and transunion, to make the concept more acceptable. Then Nike battled Adidas for marketing supremacy to add even more light to the vision of one versus three but it only made the three more acceptable as an option at all. Just as so many denominations within the church system give light to the acceptability of disease variants. You can call them Coronavirus denominations.

As denominations give way to variants, so do such marketing tactics such as the 2011, 13, and 15 BMW 3 series class and the iPhones 10, 11, 12. And there wouldn't have been any iPhone 11 without any iPhone 10. Just as there can never be a solution if a problem doesn't exist. Sounds like a great way to sell something to me. Create the product, then create a problem that makes people run to your product. Or scare them into thinking they are dying from something God created to keep them alive through inflated numbers caused by monetary incentives for a Coronavirus diagnosis, at .3 percent!

Chapter 16: WHY Guns?

Every human being has a basic need for oxygen, and plants, trees, and grass need to produce oxygen through photosynthesis by exchanging the carbon dioxide we provide them for it. Because of this natural proof, we know God invented nature to keep us alive, not to kill us. We all learned this in the second grade, or were some of us not paying attention in class? Or did our teacher just suck?

If humans are replacing their oxygen intake for half of the day with carbon dioxide trapped by masks when we exhale, especially in thick cloth ones or double masks, they rid themselves of a basic human need. Not only do the lungs shrink, now used to much less air intake, the rest of the body doesn't receive enough oxygen either. Let's take the central nervous system for example. If our nerves become damaged, we start to lean the reaction seesaw on the emotional side versus the logical one, but that's not the side we want the seesaw to tip on.

If people knew that every 'strong' country's government was paying their hospitals roughly $13,000 for each Coronavirus pronounced case within their doors, along with triple that amount for them being on a ventilator, do you think they would trust those doctors anymore? Do you trust your car salesman? If that car salesman's chances of survival, even thriving in life depend on your sale, who do you think the salesman will lookout for? You? These 'strong' countries, as laid out in the first and second "Confessions of an Economic Hitman", created ties with the U.S. By relinquishing their own economic control to the zionist led capitalists. They were being promised riches by these economic hitmen in exchange for their resources.

These economic hitmen sound a lot like homewreckers who come in and promise you love and riches only to leave you with internal issues in the long run. Have these western governments, Britain and the U.S. been fornicating with wives that already belong to someone? According to the refusal of Palestine to the British zionists' proposal to settle there, "the bride is beautiful but she belongs to another man".

After numerous hypocrisies thrown out by another U.S. President that swore on a bible, like saying Sadam Hussein was hiding weapons of mass destruction in Iraq back in 2002, then a month later saying Sadam is planning to obtain them, George W Bush seemed like he was creating reasons to invade an innocent country. The Taliban were an Afghani force, anyways. Why Iraq? Twenty years later, there have been no no alleged mustard gas found, and the aluminum tubes George suspected were weapons of mass destruction weren't even suitable for weaponry. However at the time, Iraq was the second largest producer of oil in the world, right behind Saudi Arabia. Sounds like another reason to sell out their muslim brothers and sisters.

And even with such propaganda taking over media like that the U.S. is going to free these countries from their oppressive regimes, does this action really make sense? If you were comfortable in your own home, then looked outside of your window and saw two brothers fighting in their own home across the street, would you go out of your way to break into their home and break up the fight? The police would consider you a criminal because you broke into someone's home, wouldn't they? The reasoning behind it wouldn't matter.

When people look back at the stats leaders in sports, they don't look at their career injuries, or what kind of coach they had, or what kind of shoes they wore. They look at the numbers. Women lie, men lie, numbers don't lie. In the past two decades the numbers show this; there were about 1,000,000 innocent civilian deaths in just the middle east due to organized U.S. invasions, and that is only in Iraq, Afghanistan, Syria, and Yemen. The amount of innocent deaths in the U.S. due to individual ‘terrorist’ attacks? About 100, and they aren’t even labeled muslim.

The greatest part of the story however, is that George W. never provided reasoning as to why these muslim countries would seek to harm the U.S. other than 'hating American freedom'. I bet everyone feels the freedom in 2021, like freedom to breathe air. That was sarcasm. If George would have simply followed the ‘women lie, men lie, numbers don't lie’ concept, he would have gone to the Quran that leads the ways of life for the people he was pointing his finger at. To his surprise, nowhere in the Quran would he have found verses where God commands the believing people to attack someone based on disagreement. In fact, the only time force is allowed is through self defense, as any parent would teach their child. I mean all George had to do was open up an Arabic English dictionary to see that the title of the religion islam only translates into submission.

George W’s hypocrisy reminds me of churches' preachings, making the path clearer for the propaganda on the other side to be believable. For example, the simplest of which is a new testament counteracting an old testament but both still being sold as one. Or Jesus prostrating and praying to a god in Matthew 26:39, then claiming he is God in John 10:30? God wouldn't contradict, God is the All wise. Only if the old testament would have become corrupted, God would have sent the new one. But doesn't this give way to God sending the Quran if the new testament got corrupted as well? The Quran was in fact revealed five hundred years after the Bible was.

There is even this pillar of the prophet Muhammad (pbuh) in front of The U.S. Supreme Court, how ironic is that? That is the numbers not lying that the U.S. government was once fond of sharia law. The amount of hate being directed toward sharia nowadays is as backwards as the churches' hypocritical teachings leading you to believe people who are very peaceful are terrorists, and that the police are now here to kill you instead of protect you

Yeah I know, Fox News is hard to be trusted because of their blatant prejudice against muslims in the past few yaers. And in order to stay with the women lie, men lie concept, the proof that I will include here is their titles when an attack happens by a muslim versus someone of any other ethnic group. Numbers don't lie. The muslims are always labeled as the 'terrorists', but there is all sorts of other attacks causing terror going on. But with a label comes an object to point a finger at, or a point of attention for the eyes in the business sense.

Labels such as Taliban, Al Quida, Isis, Hamas, Hezbollah all remind me of those 9 fake criminals in the suspect lineup to distract from the zionist imperialism taking place before our very eyes. Depending on if your information is from a primary source such as a first hand account and not business tied media, you may already have been exposed to this truth. Even going into a Barnes & Noble nowadays propagates the imperialist message, with only Bibles and Torahs (old testament) on shelves, but no Qurans to be found. This is just one of many propaganda examples in the Divided States.

Even the comedic genius, Sasha Baren Cohen plays a role of a middle eastern leader in the movie “The Dictator”. His character ultimately pushes for 'democracy' and the American way of life to paint a picture in the minds of the middle east diaspora that this is the 'new norm'. Movies like this create bias toward the people of the middle east just as rap does toward black people. Ironically, with the proof of Tanzania's President testing fruit positive for Coronavirus, you have all literally been tested “Coronavirus aladeen”. With the chances of dying from Coronavirus being almost one in a thousand, and the president being one of them, it only makes the situation more suspicious. Then when we translate this suspicion into the borders of the USA, another alarm goes off when we see the Walmarts in minority and inner city communities filled with masks and white majority suburban Walmarts like normal. But if masks rid us of our natural human necessity, that means the plan is to hurt the minorities.

All of these minorities are trusting Bill Gates, who apparently is now the biggest private owner of farmland in the world. I think Bill's back cannot handle all that gardening. This previously mentioned fact plus the fact that he is a top spokesperson for beyond meat equals what? Looks to me like Bill is trying to create a system we cannot escape, unlike we did when he lost the tech battle to Apple. But remember the lesser of two evils concept. Ultimately, both Apple and Microsoft will have a role to play in the social ranking system already being used at universities. If a social ranking currency system is implemented in the world, just as the American dollar once was and 5G now is, there would virtually (figuratively & literally) be no escape.

If Bill wants to keep you trapped inside of his tech world which he profits so greatly from, controlling your food intake would be a great route to take. Now, Bill could argue that he is just doing great things for humanity, as he is with vaccines. Even in the Bible, the times of Meloch existed where humanity was giving its sacrifices to a deity other than God. Eventually, this was forbidden as God should be the only receiver of sacrifices. Wait, why would God want sacrifices? This sounds like something from a horror movie. What would be the reason? It is a sacrifice for the guilt of sin, they say. This is exactly why the covenant was broken between God and the Jews thousands of years ago, as they were sacrificing bulls on their altars. Exodus 29:36.

Anyways, in comparison with the times of Meloch, humanity has now started sacrificing its God given meat for human made meat. If the same man that propagates the meat propagates the vaccines, then is humanity starting to sacrifice its God given health for human made health? Not only tech is becoming artificial. From what I have seen in my twenty years in the USA, people are exposed to as much of “Jesus” as they are to celebrities. And as Jesus supposedly acted as God, what are these celebrities such as Bill Gates acting like?

It is only human to initially perceive that something material can be God because our eyes only see material things. It is the convenient thing to do. No shame on any religions such as Buddhism, Christianity, or Catholicism for praising material idols; just as there would be no shame on a kid that made a mistake and didn't know better. And if the televisions and phones all around them made them perceive islam as a violent religion, I don't blame them for not wanting to learn more about it. Subconscious branding can be very powerful.

In 2021, most of the world has fallen ill with a metaphorical virus called convenience. The youth is now so used to having everything at the tip of their thumbs that incentive is a dying trait. As convenience grows when we can have everything at our fingertips, freedom dies along with incentive, and we expose ourselves to more of the media's subconscious branding that feeds business. Speaking of incentive, why was the incentive of any of these 'terrorist' regimes not questioned? Sure, we were told that these 'terrorists' wanted to eliminate the American way of life, but why? What solid reason would be their motive? What were their 'numbers'?

The fact of the matter is that the first ever Taliban group was created by the United States itself to fight off the Russians back in the early 1980's. Hillary Clinton said it herself in a speech that the American government funded the groups responsible for all of the bloodshed. It all started under the power of her husband after all, just as the invasion I was born in did in Bosnia. Bill, who the people of my country see as a savior for attacking invading Serbian forces (four years later), pushed for the recruitment of soldiers in Afghanistan. America did this in order to wipe out the villages on the territory of where they, along with the British, had oil pipelines being constructed, and have an excuse to send their troops there. But those troops were really there just to guard pipeline construction.

Imperialism, it is what they did to my country too. They claim to “bring peace”, but really bring business that feeds them money while it feeds us dopamine rushes. The zionists have taken over the world with media. It is the easiest way to imperialize the mind. However the greatness of The Creator, God, is so great, that as those troops were stationed in those lands, they were introduced to what muslims really were. They were generous people, so the soldiers came back and converted in numbers. Reciprocity.

Information is all over the internet. I remember a meme back when I scrolled and scrolled said, "Google mothersucka, do you use it?" A couple of weeks before September 11th happened, George W. Bush sent a message to Saddam Hussein,”Either you accept our offer of a carpet of gold, or we bury you under a carpet of bombs." If there was ever any bit of evidence to cause a person to think that 9/11 was a set up, I think this is it. Also on March 5, 2001, The Pentagon produced a document titled “Foreign Suitors for Iraqi Oilfield Contracts”. What the hell?

In 2001, Microsoft was growing rapidly. If Bill Gates is getting paid from the hardware he makes, which a person would probably use daily, I would assume Bill would want to make the most money possible. In order to do that, Bill's hardware would have to send user data to businesses so the businesses know how to run their marketing. 9/11 worked perfectly for both Gates and Bush. Bill got richer and George got his carpet.

The other fact of the matter is that jihad means struggle. The ultimate struggle is to put other people before yourself in life, what any true muslim believes. Jihad isn't the battlecry most think it is. Jihad can be something as simple as wasting your own time to hold the door for a stranger at the market. The exchange of your time for their convenience is a struggle. Volunteering at orphanages and nursing homes is struggle. In my experience in teaching in the USA, so much as mentioning God inside the school was struggle. Is it any surprise? Education has become a business because of two words, student loans.

It all starts with the grade school system. For example, in my high school, the grading scale was on a seven point scale. A's in upper level classes were seven points, B's six, and so forth. In lower level classes, A's were six points, B's were five, and so forth. Keep in mind my school was in Cypress, one of the richest areas of Greater Houston. In other poorer areas however, they use the five point or standard four point scale, as they do in the colleges and universities both rich and poor seek to get into at some point. So in poor districts in Houston like H.I.S.D, a student would be at a disadvantage. Here's why.

My grade point average coming out of high school was a 6.3 out of 7, not to boast (top 9 percent). In order to get it on the same page as the universities I was applying to, I had to scale it back to the 4 point format. So 6.3 divided by 7 to get a per point number, then multiply by 4 to scale accordingly. My GPA turned out to be a 3.64. But if I went to the school in the inner city and got the same grades I did in Cypress, my GPA would have been a 3.3 as my A's would have counted as four points, B's as three, and so forth. So if the richer kids get into the expensive universities, that means more income for them and fewer support they have to give, such as scholarships. Hence why I mention education has become a business.

In result, student loans become an option for the poor kids that want to get into 'good' universities, along with the rich kids that are only living in the rich area due to their credit score. As we usually put our money into one bank, these 'rich' families now take on more credit and more bills to juggle. And as we usually stick to one side of a coin, a person who commits one good or bad deed usually commits another in the same respect. Simply put, more money goes to the man. Who is the man? The zionist banking institutions that the interest from the loans goes to such as your friendly neighbor, JP Morgan Chase.

Why have we even let our schooling systems become places where commission triumphs over the well being of humanity? Look where it has placed us in today's world. These expensive universities are using the same 'premium' pricing techniques as car dealerships. Because of such schemes as the grade point scale, they allow themselves to charge so much because they are fed by the rich areas. And since a community college exists, it assumes the role of the black car, while the university assumes the role of the blue car. Then imagine, at the end of the day the diploma becomes useless as technology replaces you as an employee anyways, rich kid or poor. Or did you think the labor shortage was to keep everyone virus free?

Weren't there mask filters on Snapchat months before Coronavirus was a thing? Subconscious branding is all around us. Even acts such as 'banning' Tik Tok only made it even more popular and glued in our subconscious. It was even recently advertised all over the EURO soccer tournament. We don't want to watch the things that give us joy walk away from us, do we?

It seems like the distractions are laying in plain sight, like when the U.S. fed media outlets stories of former president Barack Obama's muslim background while he was one of the biggest investors into the invasions being initiated for the pipelines in the middle east. How would you expect us to know what's going on behind the curtain if we have oceans of information consuming our attention through the advertisements we see, like commercials for knives sets. This is such a small distraction but I use the example it so you can see the effect it has. A lot of people own knives sets, maybe you are one of them. But why do we need more than one knife?

From a bigger picture perspective, the advertisements have changed society. If it is hip to cover your ears with Ear Pods that probably are feeding your brain even more advertisements through it, that means it is hip to close ourselves off from one another. As a result, we are now afraid of being five feet apart from someone, or simply just cannot understand people because of the mask.

Maybe it's not us who cannot understand. Maybe along with making themselves deaf, people are also willingly making themselves dumb. The parable of the three monkeys is sweeping the world, all we are missing is virtual reality headsets to make us blind as well. With our world health being diminished with liars like the World Health Organization, many of us are feeding our lungs the carbon dioxide they are expelling, just as we are feeding our ears the propaganda. More propaganda means more obedience, and more obedience means more carbon dioxide and a less healthy more dopamine seeking brain.

Now, the topic you have been waiting for, the domestic guns and not the ones the U.S. supplied overseas. Gun control or "come and take it"? Since Coronavirus has become a thing, America, along with the rest of the world, has become a very uneasy place to sleep at night. People are at more risk of mental instability because of the stress with new reports of daily violence in their midst, along with a lack of incentive with unemployment so high. Then when you add the extra boost on the unemployment checks to motivate a trip to the gun store, bad things start to happen. Seems to me like a cycle that the news stations can break. But why would a person tune into the news if it didn't bring the excitement, the dopamine rush of breaking information? What if it was smiles and rainbows like the real world was created by The Creator to be?

Unfortunately the gun situation has become a matter of God, as we were bound to get guns into the hands of average citizens. because it was a way for the National Rifle Association to make money. Such a good one in fact that it has become an industry; a man made industry like alcohol, automobiles, “plant based” meat (which really just means processed), smartphones, masks, vaccines, televisions, the list goes on and on. It is amazing to think that all of these things are not a necessity neither for a human being to survive nor to be happy.

The Creator created the cows to give us meat and milk, trees and plants to harvest nuts, fruits, and vegetables, and even flooded 70 percent of our planet with water we who are made up of 70 percent water actually need to survive; but we drink Coca Cola and margaritas instead because that is what the commercials in between news stories teach us to do. Then the news comes back on and shows school shootings and concert shootings to get you back to the shelves and arm yourself. With movies like The Purge coming out instigating fear inside of us, it doesn't surprise me how people fall for it so easily.

Wouldn't you want to distance yourself from someone who owns a deadly weapon and is emotionally unstable? I remember the emotional instability looming when I was in college at Texas A&M. Thank God I graduated before open carry laws were put in place. Colleges and Universities were always places of scholarly discussion, but who wants to discuss with a cowboy wielding a weapon? What if something bigger is coming? I mean just as the iPhone 10, 11, and 12 arose, and three cameras arose from one, people will get bored of their gun one day, and they will want a new one. Not to mention they will get tired of their investment going to waste in the closet.

Wouldn't the most efficient way to keep them on such a cycle as they are on with the phones be to put the people into a virtual world of fighting? History has shown us the possibility is very clear, with so much of our youth immersing themselves in the repetitive slaughter world of Call of Duty and Fortnite, even paying good amounts of money within the virtual world to come out on top. Don't forget, there is no respawning in real life. That isn't what Ryan Reynolds, the popular American actor wants you to think. In his new movie "Free Guy", which has been advertised as coming soon for the past five years, Ryan plays 'the average Joe' who now has access to a virtual world like Fortnite, which is like Sims and Grand Theft Auto put together. Why do we keep popularizing the concept of hurting each other? If we only knew that owning a gun cannot save us from the mental abuse we are being put through by the screens that advertise that gun to us, not to mention the mental abuse we give our children when they accidentally grab it off of the dresser and God forbid anything more is to come.

One side of the world is being organizationally demolished by the same weapons the culprit supplies its own citizens with. The fuel to the violent fire grows in the hearts of the domestic citizens, only to spark belief that the other side of the world is capable of the same intent. Just as one camera was turned into three on an iPhone for the sake of business, these are all clear material manipulations to distract from not only The Creator, but from the slaughter of the people who believe in that creator. Next time we look into that camera lens or lenses, remember the full undivided attention your creator has given you your entire life by sustaining your existence. The only thing The Creator seeks in return is for us to give our full undivided attention to the people that are suffering. Is it so hard to believe the U.S. government would kill its own people to start all of this imperialism now that we know they are killing us with 5G?

Chapter 17: WHY Fluoride?

Imagine if a week after George Floyd died and everyone went out and protested, the American people all became super racist and all started killing black people. I know, this is a really messed up scenario, but the same mechanism is set up in Israel with vaccine passports. In the early summer of 2021, protests crowded the streets of the occupying state of Israel because of vaccine passports. Thousands marched because they felt they were being “put into slavery”. Ironically, just a few weeks later, within the midst of the distractions of their new government, they throw out that 90 percent of Israel is vaccinated. How blatant of a lie, not all of those who oppose the vaccine protested, so there is no way the number was 90 percent just 10 days after. Could the Divided States be lying about their vaccination numbers as well? I mean they are the closest allies on the face of the Earth, America and Israel. You can call one father, one the son, and the holy spirit could be the credit system.

Last time you went grocery shopping, got academic advising, or even sat in a classroom, you probably noticed yet another screen separating you from someone. Even before the variants started becoming popular, businesses were still requiring their employees to mask up. I am not even talking about restaurants here. As the republicans stick by a side that seems to be taking action within its own states, they as well as the democrats are being enslaved in the media's and businesses' mask pressure. It is about almost as much as the subconscious pressure to drive fast after watching a “Fast And The Furious” movie. It seems to me that those movies flourished a lot of business for the car industry. Not to mention, they led to numerous deaths from street racing in the past two decades. Remember how kids repeat what they hear?

They are all the way up to the tenth “Fast And The Furious’. Next thing you know, they might make three fasts in one to follow what they have done to God almighty and camera lenses. Don't ever forget about the distractions such as DJ Khaled posing to be a muslim but very obviously spreading evil through his music and advertising of alcohol. Remember Jada? Her dad saw plenty of DJ Khaled's ads for Ciroc. One thing I didn't mention in Jada's story is other things that messed with her dad's brain were business manipulation tactics such as the toothpaste, Crest. Any store I've ever walked inside of, I've seen as many crest toothpaste flavors as church denominations, too many.

There are too many hoops we have to go through now as well; hoops that they say 5G is bringing solutions for, as if the solutions didn't already exist a decade ago. The hoops like two factor authentication, and chips when making a transaction have just been ways to make life two step instead of one, as did phone passcodes a long time ago. Not to mention the obedience it builds to a screen when the card reader tells you to remove the card. These are all subconscious business tactics that are incorporated into the bigger picture of world profit.

Just as you can get subconsciously branded through the things your eyes consume, it can often be worse for your subconscious for your mouth to consume the wrong things; like pork for example, which many religions forbid because of the filth it lives in. Not only is that an obvious red flag, but the fact that pigs enjoy group sexual encounters starts to connect dots. Pigs enjoy watching and being watched. You are what you eat, remember?

Pork isn't only available in the meat form however. That is if you would consider the three percent of it that you would consume with your average processed meat. Imagine, the FDA only requires that three percent of processed meat be actual meat, where most of the remainder is the emulsifier soy lecithin. Pork can also be consumed in gummy bears, vitamins, or anything with gelatin in it. I try to stay away from places even cooking the other meat on the same grill as the pork. Fluids are released when you cook meat, aren't they? The next thing I look out for is if there are enzymes in the ingredients list. Microbial enzymes are okay, but just regular enzymes aren't halal, or efficient for your body to consume. Just enzymes can come from the same poor grade fuel of animals we shouldn't be eating. If a cow is in the same vicinity of another cow that's being tortured, isn't she going to produce poorer milk relative to the cow in a calm environment?

Then the last thing is soy. Soy is a nuclear bomb of estrogen, which women need but men don't. It is the hormone that makes a person soft, and this new craze "beyond meat" like they have at Burger King is full of it. Imagine the complete opposite of a Snickers commercial, like someone handing an NFL player "Soyckers" and him turning into Betty White. So don't be fooled by titles such as "certified angus", their certification has no real basis. The true certification is halal, which is certified to be free of cortisol, the stress hormone consumed with the meat most grocery stores and restaurants carry.

If so much of the food that's advertised contains all of these inefficient ingredients, then where else could poison lay? In our own water supply? Other than lead, high amounts of fluoride are present in sink and bath water. It gets into our pores, scalp, and stomachs. Fluoride corrupts the pineal gland, the part of our body we connect to the ground to connect to The Creator when we pray. The third eye is the part of our brain not only responsible for creativity but consciousness as well. Do we create consciousness or does consciousness create us?

Why would they want our pineal glands to be corrupted? So we can forget about the oneness of humanity and get lost in the materially greedy society corporate businesses have created? Sounds like it would lead to a lot of profit. However, even fluoride can be spotted on a label, as water filtered through reverse osmosis cuts out the fluoride. Did the title of the show Osmosis Jones hint to a rare positive subconscious branding tactic?

Even though fluoride is heavily present in toothpaste, as phosphates, sulfates, parabens, and aluminum are in other personal care products, it plays at least a positive role in preventing cavities. Just as homeowner's associations have partnered with pressure washing companies to earn commission after mandating driveways to be cleaned, water companies might be profiting off of poisoning the water The Creator already made clean for you in the first place. Vaccines might be created to cure diseases caused by vaccines. This is a very possible possibility now though, isn't it?

Companies that have branches to both testing and pharmaceuticals cannot be trusted because of the same conflict of interest the United States carries because they are profiting off of the oil they take from the countries they invade. This conflict started back in 1987. Companies such as Roshe diagnostics, who manufacture Coronavirus tests and medicine for anemia, are part of a huge conflict of interest. Whoever wants to sell Coronavirus tests also wants to push the mask mandate, chances are. They probably also want for these people wearing masks to inhale less oxygen, because without oxygen the human body cannot produce hemoglobin, causing anemia. Now, companies such as Roshe diagnostics who have hands in both the cause and effect cookie jars cannot be trusted.

I'm sure a car salesman would hope for you to total your car in order to make them more commission, if presented with the thought. They're not that terrible, I was one once. The dealership I worked for flawlessly set up the work environment around concepts of teamwork and integrity, but could never stay away from lying to the customer because their own commission was at stake. They are only human after all, but it is important to understand the matrix in order to master it. We don't want it to master us.

The matrix seems like the constant rushes of numbers of Coronavirus death swirling around every media source nowadays, and we all seem to be stuck in it. Relax, if you now know that doctors have been releasing testimonial videos saying they have been monetarily incentivized to pronounce regular deaths as Coronavirus deaths, then you may be a little more suspicious of the vaccination numbers bombarding screens all around you now. Did those same screens ever show you advertisements of vitamin c? Or d if we're talking quarantines. When I was growing up, lemons, oranges, pomegranate, and honey were big parts of my diet to keep my vitamin c levels high.

As our skin absorbs the fluoride in our bath water and we have nothing to do about it, it also absorbs the alcohol inside of hand sanitizers. This is something our children are being exposed to many times a day, slowly becoming alcoholics. Why aren't they being offered tea with lunch as it is the best for the digestion of the food, and a healthy source of caffeine to stay productive.

By the way, I just want to let it be known how frustrated I feel in August of 2021 awaiting another wave of slavery and seeing everyone falling for the plan. It really is aching to the soul. I'm even finding it difficult to write with the sadness from such corruption taking over the world. Just as The Creator put us in tests before, this is yet another. What was the main lesson behind most tests though? Will you have faith or not? It is the number one test in religion, faith in everexistence or not. Where has your faith gone world?

The final inning. The fourth quarter, maybe triple overtime. The 90th minute. From the start of this book, I had no clue what was ahead of us. Did you guys forget what Bill Gates did to innocent African kids? If you knew, maybe a black lives matter rally for a real cause would happen, for truly innocent murders for profit seeking vaccine production. Remember, as history repeats itself, so do people, especially if they have been getting away with it for so long. As I stepped away from writing because of the sheer overwhelming feeling of everything going on and how to describe it, God gave me the guidance I needed.

First I was led to the truth about Coronavirus, or “China virus”, as nobody says other than Donald Trump. And it was done to trick you, because he was in on it too. Come on, did you really think one man was going to break through the solid political foundation America built in the past century?

Then, I was led to the truth behind corporate incentives and intentions. Imagine if you are a business owner, obviously you would want to advertise to as many people as possible. Now that there is Tik Tok, Instagram, Snapchat, Youtube, Facebook, Twitter, the marketing channels have gotten much wider. What I mean by corporate intentions is to fool you with the accessibility for things such as this advertising, only to hook you on its dopamine draining cycle along with the rest of the world who may only be a customer to you. The first screen every social media opens to is the news feed, isn't it?

Another example of the same sort of irony could be the creation of the television channels showcasing gamers competing with each other. I used to think baseball wasn't a sport because it would put me to sleep at night. Then I thought golf wasn't a sport because there is no running involved. They even use carts to get around. I don't see anyone offering towels and cups of Gatorade to the elderly shopping around inside of a Walmart in those carts. Wait, isn't Nascar considered a sport in America?

Now that I see what the term sport has become as it is getting branded onto the act of playing video games, I think baseball and golf should be Olympic sports. But since the easiest thing for a human to do is just to sit there, make minor finger movements, and stare into the same place for hours, platforms like Twitch are just another way to trap us in the dopamine cycle so they can make more money through sponsorships from games like “God Of War”. Yes, another irony, because the only God of war is America itself, and through its mysterious “father son holy spirit” trinity concept, you can say Israel is too (may God forgive me); maybe even interest (the holy spirit).

I feel as if I haven't been the only one on a journey to truth lately. If someone wanted to prevent us from completing the journey by let's say, deterring us from our route by opening a new possibility to spend our time exploring, how do you think they would do it? If you were driving down a two lane highway and there were two big signs, one with an elephant and one with a donkey on it, saying the lanes are exit only (left and right respectively), how many people on that highway do you think would keep going straight to find out the highway ends only to turn into a regular street?

One of the greatest business tactics is offering the premium option, remember? If the premium option is super overpriced to make the also overpriced regular option seem more affordable, aren't both still overpriced? Remember, two wrongs don't make a right. Like how governments purposely put fluoride into water to poison our third eyes, but maybe also give the smarter set of people the option to pay for something God given.

A lot of my family members complained about how praying took so much time out of their day and how 5 times is way too much. But as water needs to keep flowing to keep its purity, your body needs to keep moving for your mind to stay kinetic. Muslims pray right before the sun rises, when it begins its descent, when it reaches a point where a person's shadow is of equal height to them, when it begins its final descent on the horizon, and after night falls.

Have you ever been on an airplane? Wouldn't it be fair to thank God for giving you the might as a human being to ascend into the air, reach a cruising altitude, begin an initial and final descent, and land back on the ground safely? And I can imagine a person who prays five times is more productive than a person who only prays after he or she wakes up and before bed. It is called the compound effect. There is a book written about it. Life is full of snowball effects, especially when it comes to habits.

Habits are a force so much more powerful than we think, but not as strong as the four forces of God. For example, a person who spends a lot of time on the phone before bed or with LED light bulbs in their room will have a harder time falling asleep because the white light harms melatonin production in the pineal gland, a.k.a the third eye. Even having the radiation from phone signals or wifi encompassing a home can cause stress, as the human body senses something unnatural but doesn't know how to escape it. Haven't you seen so many kids wearing masks just spinning around in circles? Ants haven’t been far off from that in their movement lately. I understand a lot of us have alarms set, so it is best for us to stay in airplane mode overnight during the time our pineal gland is most active. If it is the area responsible for creativity and consciousness, isn’t it responsible for dreaming as well?

If a person's pineal gland is as active as God intended it to be, that person would see God's guidance abundant in their life. God makes the guidance clear through events many would call chance. Then the channels of the chance are through numbers or auditory cues. What I mean by auditory cues is let's say for example, you are watching tv after you prayed to God for guidance in your love life. You could be watching something completely irrelevant, for example a basketball game, and could hear a neighbor yell out "Leave him!" at the same time as a coach does in the game you are watching. Remember, absolutely everything is manifested by God with precise calculation. Do you ever see the birds crash into each other when they are flying in flocks?

Why would God put a clear sign for humanity to revolve in a counterclockwise motion by having the last prophet, Muhammad (pbuh) ascend to heaven from the kaba in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, then have people, even birds miraculously revolve around it in the opposite way that we watch clocks go everywhere around us? The reason why they go in that direction is because the heart is placed a bit to the left inside of every human. So as the law of gravity states that objects of great mass will pull in other mass, it makes sense to revolve around something with the organ that gives us life closer to it. What explains clockwise movement? Sundials? Aren't sundials based on the shadow that the sun makes? For example, if the sun rises in the east and sets in the west, its natural movement is from right to left. However, a sundial moves based on the shadow that goes from left to right. What a perfect example of creator versus creation.

The Creator created everything in pairs. We have two eyes, eyebrows, nostrils, cheeks, arms, hands, legs, etc. The beautiful thing about all of these also is that they are symmetrical, and because we are exposed to so many examples of symmetry since we open our eyes as babies, humans have a natural obsession with it. Remember not all obsessions are bad, look at what basketball was to Kobe. Humans find symmetrical things more attractive. When we roll one window down, don't we want to roll the other one down as well? But according to my Bosnian culture, the air coming in from all sides is very damaging to your head. I don't know the science behind it, but I sure feel massive pressure in my head when I drive with both windows down.

Humans are also obsessed with rounded edges. The moon, sun, planets, eyes, nostrils, even our heads are round. That is another reason why men are attracted to peach shaped butts and bigger breasts, and women to more muscular men. It is another tally of a rounded edge to the subconscious. Some say men are even aroused by pregnant women because the women “glow”, but it is only the extra curve that is more pleasing to the eyes of men. Their puffed up cheeks can be pleasing in the same sense. Corners are not something God created, but rounded edges are; to keep humans reminded of the infinite cycle of life. The wheels on the bus wouldn't be able to go round and round if they were in the shape of a square would they?

Chapter 18: WHY Read?

Quran recitation audio available on whyunify.com

Order your free Quran @ why-islam.org

God bless you and your family.

Copyright 2021
WhyUnify.com